Thalapathy era begins in TN

"I do not hail from any royal lineage, I am like you, like your son, your brother. This is your regime," the new CM tells supporters after taking oath; Udhayanidhi Stalin chosen LoP in TN assembly

CHENNAI

After four days of intense political uncertainty, the state has finally got a government. Heralding a new chapter in Tamil Nadu political landscape, TVK president Chandrasekar Joseph Vijay assumed office as the Chief Minister of the state on Sunday.

He made history as the first chief minister of the state since 1967 who does not come from either of the two Dravidian majors (DMK or AIADMK).

Among those present at the swearing-in ceremony were Rahul Gandhi, Vijay's parents SA Chandrasekhar and Shoba Chandrasekhar, and several personalities from the Tamil film industry, including Trisha Krishnan, who attended the event at Jawaharlal Nehru Stadium. Vijay could form the government after securing support from Congress, CPI, CPI(M), VCK and IUML.

Vijay signs off on 200 units of free power in first major act

Soon after taking over the reins of the government, Vijay cleared key files relating to free electricity supply (up to 200 units), the creation of a women's protection force, and anti-drug squads in every district. He also promised the people of the state a clean and transparent government.

Vijay also effected a key bureaucratic reshuffle, appointing IAS officers Dr P Senthilkumar and G Laxmi Priya as the Chief Secretaries to the Chief Minister.

In his maiden speech, CM Vijay appealed to the people to give him some time to fulfil his electoral promises. "You have placed such a big responsibility on my hands. At the same time, I request you to give me some time as well. In a step-by-step manner, I will try to fulfill everything that I have assured. I will fulfill my assurances. At the same time, if you give me some time, it will be helpful and cooperative for me. This is your regime," he said.

Referring to the state's huge debt burden of around Rs 10 lakh crore, he promised a white paper on the finances. "I want to take it forward from there," he said.

He assured that he would be transparent and open. "As I have said before, I will not touch even a single paisa from the people's money. It is not necessary for me either and you know that very well. I will not err, and I will not allow my Council of Ministers to err.

If anyone has thoughts of indulging in such practices now that we have won, please erase them from your minds," he warned.

> This is a new beginning, a new era of real, secular social justice starts now.

'I will be the only power centre'

Madras HC grills ECI over postal ballot mix-up in TN seat

CHENNAI

The Madras High Court on Sunday questioned the Election Commission of India (ECI) over complaints that a postal ballot meant for Tirupattur Assembly constituency in Sivaganga district was mistakenly sent to Tirupattur constituency in Tirupattur district -- a seat where DMK leader and state minister K R Periyakaruppan lost by one vote -- and directed the ECI to file an affidavit on the issue on Monday.

Notably, Periyakaruppan, who polled 83,364 votes against TVK's R Sreenivasa Sethupathi's 83,365 in the recently concluded Tamil Nadu Assembly elections, has sought a recount and an interim injunction restraining the TVK MLA-elect from taking oath and participating in Assembly proceedings.

During a special Sunday sitting, a vacation bench comprising justices L Victoria Gowri and N Senthilkumar also grilled the ECI over what it termed an evasive response to the issue. "What you say is ECI cannot open the issue because we have become functus officio. Therefore, it is a matter of election petition," the bench noted.

Put aside differences and strengthen party, Nikhil tells JDS workers

JDS leaders and workers were urged to unite, strengthen organisation, and prepare electorally.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Nikhil Kumaraswamy, State president of the youth wing of Janata Dal (Secular), called upon party leaders and workers to set aside personal differences and work unitedly to strengthen the organisation, asserting that the JDS would return to power in Karnataka in the coming years.

He was addressing party workers at a convention organised at Bhagat Singh Stadium in Bengaluru as part of the silver jubilee celebrations of the JDS under the theme "Janata Dal with the People – Strong Janata Dal, Prosperous Karnataka."

Nikhil said party workers should be empowered in the upcoming panchayat and local body elections and urged leaders to end internal rivalries immediately. He said people who questioned the relevance and strength of the JDS would receive a fitting response through the party's organisational growth and electoral performance.

According to him, workers were fully prepared to rebuild the party's presence across the state, and there was no need for leaders to worry about the party's position in individual constituencies. "Time will decide everything," he remarked.

Referring to recent election outcomes in southern states, Nikhil said the youth had demonstrated their ability to elect capable leaders and governments. He appealed to party workers to support Prime Minister Narendra Modi's vision of a "Developed India" and stressed the need to bring youth leadership into mainstream politics.Targeting the ruling Indian National Congress government in Karnataka, he accused it of merely pretending to support backward communities while failing to utilise funds allocated for their welfare. He alleged that grants earmarked for backward class development corporations had remained unspent during the Congress government's tenure.

Nikhil further claimed that funds meant for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes were being diverted towards guarantee schemes. He said merely providing financial assistance under schemes like Gruhalakshmi would not ensure women's empowerment and insisted women should receive their rightful constitutional benefits.

Expressing concern over unemployment among educated youth, he alleged that job fairs organised by the government were only symbolic exercises without meaningful employment opportunities. He urged party workers to highlight the achievements of the Centre and expose the failures of the state government before the people.

HC reduces jail term of elderly road accident convict to one day

The Karnataka High Court has reduced the prison sentence of a 71-year-old man convicted in a fatal road accident case from one year to a single day of simple imprisonment, taking into account his serious health condition and physical disability.

Soaring LPG prices push Bengaluru MSMEs into heavy losses, industry bodies seek relief

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Micro, Small and Medium Enterprises (MSMEs) across Bengaluru are grappling with rising operational costs following a steep increase in commercial LPG prices over the past few months. Industry representatives said the sharp hikes have pushed many units into losses ranging between 20 and 30 percent, particularly those heavily dependent on LPG for manufacturing and production activities.

Engineering units, welding workshops, paint factories, battery manufacturers and barrel-making industries in and around Bengaluru have been among the worst affected. Industrialists said LPG prices per metric tonne rose nearly 50 percent between March and May, severely affecting businesses operating under fixed annual contracts.

According to manufacturers, the latest hike of ₹991 has pushed the price of a 19-kg commercial LPG cylinder to ₹3,153. However, due to supply shortages, several private suppliers in the open market are reportedly charging as much as ₹4,500 per cylinder.

S. Shanmugam, a barrel manufacturer, said industries were struggling to cope with the sudden increase. "Before March, LPG prices were around ₹75,000 per metric tonne. In April, they rose to ₹1.48 lakh and have now touched nearly ₹1.68 lakh in May. Since many industries operate on long-term contracts, we are unable to revise prices immediately and are forced to absorb the losses," he explained.

D.P. Narendran, President of the Peenya Industries Association, said a large section of industries directly or indirectly depended on LPG-based operations. He alleged that inadequate supply had worsened the crisis and reiterated the demand for a separate industrial LPG quota.

Meanwhile, the Federation of Karnataka Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FKCCI) has written to the Centre seeking urgent intervention and relief measures for MSMEs.FKCCI President Uma Reddy said the sudden increase in LPG prices had nearly doubled production costs for several engineering industries overnight. She warned that the impact was already visible in sectors such as hospitality, where food prices had begun to rise.

Industry bodies have sought relief measures similar to those provided during the Covid-19 pandemic, including guaranteed credit support, deferment of EMIs and GST payments for six months without penalties, and extension of repayment periods.

Case filed against IIMB professor's wife over alleged assault of Manipur woman

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

A case has been registered at Mico Layout Police Station against the wife of an Indian Institute of Management Bangalore (IIMB) professor for allegedly assaulting and wrongfully confining a woman from Manipur employed as a domestic worker.

Police said the case was registered based on a complaint filed by 23-year-old Nian Phounuwan, a member of the Kuki community. The complaint accused Anshu, wife of IIMB professor Amar, of physical assault and harassment.

According to the complaint, the woman had been working as a housekeeper at the professor's residence on the IIMB campus in Bilekahalli since 2021. She alleged that she was not provided proper food from the beginning of her employment and was subjected to physical abuse whenever she fell ill.

The complainant further alleged that her mobile phone had been taken away and that she was assaulted by Anshu on April 15. She also claimed that she was confined inside the house and prevented from stepping out.

In her statement to police, the woman said that on May 4 she was forced to seek food from a neighbour because she had not been given anything to eat since morning. She reportedly used the neighbour's phone to contact her relatives living in Bengaluru and informed members of a Kuki student organisation about her situation.

Based on the complaint, police registered a case against Anshu under Sections 115(2) relating to voluntarily causing hurt and 127(4) pertaining to wrongful confinement under the Bharatiya Nyaya Sanhita (BNS).

Police officials confirmed that an investigation has been launched and statements are being recorded as part of the inquiry. Authorities said further action would be taken based on the findings of the investigation.

The incident has drawn attention from members of the northeastern community in Bengaluru, with several groups reportedly seeking a fair investigation into the allegations.

GBA intensifies drive against dangerous compound walls after Bowring Hospital tragedy

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Greater Bengaluru Authority (GBA) has intensified its citywide crackdown on unsafe and damaged compound walls following the recent wall collapse near Bowring Hospital that claimed seven lives.

As part of the ongoing safety drive, civic officials on Sunday demolished a dangerously weakened compound wall in the KR Puram area of East Bengaluru. The structure, located near Lakshminarayana Bhavana on Chikkabasavanapura Main Road in Bhattarahalli, was reportedly on the verge of collapse and posed a major risk to residents and commuters.

Officials said the damaged wall near the 5th Cross area had become structurally unsafe and was removed by Bengaluru East City Municipal authorities as a precautionary measure to avoid another tragedy.

The intensified inspections began after the fatal Bowring Hospital incident, which raised serious concerns over the condition of ageing compound walls across Bengaluru, especially during heavy rain and strong winds.

Ejipura flyover misses another deadline as commuters continue facing severe traffic woes

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Bengaluru's long-delayed Ejipura-Kendriya Sadan flyover project has once again missed its completion deadline, with civic authorities now indicating that the 2.4-km elevated corridor is likely to be opened for traffic only by the end of October this year.

The flyover, considered one of the city's most delayed infrastructure projects, has continued to inconvenience thousands of commuters travelling through the busy southeast Bengaluru corridors connecting Ejipura, Koramangala and surrounding areas.

Authorities had earlier stated that the project would be completed by June 2026. After failing to meet that target, the deadline was revised to September. However, pending construction work and unresolved bottlenecks have now forced another extension.

Officials said one of the major reasons for the prolonged delay was a land-related issue near St. John's Medical College Hospital. Permissions required for the construction of a crucial portal framework in the area had reportedly remained pending for several years.

According to authorities, the issue was finally resolved in February after the hospital administration granted the necessary clearance, allowing work on the critical section to resume. Engineers involved in the project said the portal structure was essential for linking major portions of the flyover.

Officials claimed that construction activities accelerated considerably after the clearance was secured and that the remaining work was now progressing at a faster pace.

The flyover project was originally awarded in 2017 to Simplex Infrastructure Limited at an estimated cost of ₹203.2 crore. However, officials said the contractor completed only 42.8 percent of the work over nearly four-and-a-half years.

Authorities cited inadequate machinery deployment, delays in execution and failure to clear payments to subcontractors as major reasons for the stalled progress. Construction eventually came to a complete halt, triggering widespread criticism from residents and commuters.

Following prolonged delays, the Karnataka High Court intervened in the matter, after which the original contract was terminated in March 2022.The remaining work was later awarded to BSCPL Infrastructure Limited in November 2023. Civic officials believe the change of contractor helped revive the stalled project and improve the pace of construction.

Meanwhile, authorities are also undertaking land acquisition and transfer procedures involving nearly 5,998 square metres.

KSLSA and Dhare Foundation launch mission to plant two crore saplings around Bengaluru

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka State Legal Services Authority (KSLSA), in association with Dhare Foundation, has launched an ambitious environmental initiative to plant two crore saplings around Bengaluru in an effort to create a massive "green ring" around the city.

The project aims to develop a green buffer zone across a 50-km radius surrounding Bengaluru to combat rising temperatures, pollution and the loss of green cover caused by rapid urbanisation.

KSLSA Executive Chairman Justice N. S. Sanjay Gowda announced the initiative during a high-level meeting and stressed the importance of environmental protection as part of sustainable development and citizens' rights.

Under the initiative, Dhare Foundation will spearhead plantation drives across government land, institutional campuses, highways, lake bunds, parks and community spaces. The campaign will focus on planting native species such as neem, banyan and mango trees to improve biodiversity and ecological balance.

Officials said the initiative aligns with Article 21 of the Constitution, which guarantees the right to a clean and healthy environment. Legal services networks affiliated with the National Legal Services Authority (NALSA) will assist in volunteer mobilisation, awareness campaigns and monitoring activities.

To ensure transparency and long-term impact, the saplings will be geo-tagged and regularly monitored through survival audits. The organisations involved said the project would include a three-year maintenance plan to improve survival rates of the planted trees.

Environmental experts associated with the initiative believe the green corridor could help reduce Bengaluru's average temperature by 2 to 4 degrees Celsius while also improving groundwater recharge and reducing urban flooding risks.

The project will also involve schools, colleges, resident welfare groups and corporate organisations through public participation and CSR funding support. Awareness camps highlighting the connection between environmental protection and legal rights are expected to be organised across the city in the coming months.

The large-scale initiative is being viewed as a major step towards restoring Bengaluru's shrinking green cover and transforming the city into a more climate-resilient urban centre.

MLA Savadi vows to fight for farmers

CHIKKODI

In a fiery speech that has captured the state's attention, Congress MLA Laxman Savadi sent a stern warning to those who exploit sugarcane farmers. Speaking at a public event in Telasanga village, Savadi declared that he would not tolerate any injustice toward his constituents, famously stating he would "beat opponents with a ladder" if they crossed the line.

The MLA's anger stems from reports of widespread fraud at sugar factories. He accused some brokers and factory owners of "sucking the blood of farmers" by stealing two to three tonnes of cane per load. Savadi, who proudly identifies as the son of a farmer, reminded the crowd that he grew up raising cattle and attending a local government school, giving him a deep understanding of the hardships involved in growing crops.

Savadi also addressed personal attacks from his political rivals. Responding to threats that he would be "beaten by a tractor," he hit back, saying that while he knows how to handle farm equipment, he is equally prepared to use force to defend the self-respect of the 131,000 people he represents.

Looking ahead, the MLA expressed great pride in his taluk, which currently produces 76 lakh tonnes of sugarcane annually. He predicted that once new irrigation projects are finished, that number will climb to one crore tonnes. By standing firm against corruption, Savadi made it clear that his first priority is protecting the hard-earned livelihood of every farmer in the region.

Hosapete's Congress unit celebrates the Tamil Nadu coalition victory, hailing it as a triumph for democracy and social justice.

Congress celebrates Tamil Nadu coalition success in Hosapete

HOSAPETE

Energy and excitement filled the air at Dr. Puneeth Rajkumar Circle as the Congress party's Scheduled Caste unit gathered to celebrate the achievements of the coalition government in Tamil Nadu. The victory program saw a large turnout of party workers who marked the occasion by bursting firecrackers and sharing sweets with the local public.

The celebration was more than just a party event, it was a loud endorsement of coalition politics in Southern India. Workers cheered for the "success of democracy," waving flags and distributing treats to fans and passersby. For many in attendance, the political developments in Tamil Nadu represent a significant win for social justice and a model for the rest of the country to follow.

Somashekar Bantamane, the District President of the Congress SC Division, addressed the crowd, stating that the people of the South have firmly chosen the path of equality. He argued that the rejection of communal ideologies shows that voters are prioritizing constitutional values over divisive sentiments. "Tamil Nadu's model of governance is showing the direction for the entire nation," he told the gathering.

Local leaders, including Sajjat Khan and Talur Veerabhadra, joined dozens of municipal council members and unit office bearers at the event. The program served as a platform for the party to strengthen its bond with the community while highlighting its commitment to an equal society. As the festivities wrapped up, the message was clear, the workers view the Tamil Nadu success as a major milestone for their political vision.

College shortage hurts local student's big dreams

BELAGAVI

A severe lack of government pre-university (PU) colleges in Belagavi and Chikodi is threatening the future of thousands of students. Every year, over 50,000 students pass their school-leaving exams, but many find their path to higher education blocked by a system that simply doesn't have enough room.

Currently, the district only has 63 government PU colleges. Because these affordable spots fill up so fast, families are often forced to look at private institutions. For many, the high fees at these private colleges make continuing education impossible. Parents are particularly worried about their daughters, without a local, affordable college, many young women are being forced to drop out of school entirely.

Disappointment is growing after the state government approved only two new colleges for the entire region this year. Local education officials had originally asked for ten high schools to be upgraded to handle the demand. "We need colleges closer to our villages to ensure our children can keep learning," said Chandrashekhar, a concerned parent from Chikodi.

While the government colleges that do exist are working hard, even offering free online coaching for entrance exams, they are stretched to their limits. Authorities say they are still pushing to upgrade more schools in the coming days. For now, the community continues to fight for better access to education, hoping that a lack of buildings won't mean a lack of opportunity for the next generation.

Dharwad education results climb to new heights

DHARWAD

Dharwad district has achieved a major milestone in education, jumping from 18th to 12th place in the state's SSLC rankings. During a special ceremony at the District Institute of Education and Training (DIET), officials celebrated a stellar 95.5% pass rate and honored 18 students who secured the highest marks in the region.

DIET Principal Basavaraj Nalatwada credited this success to the tireless work of lecturers who regularly visited schools. These experts provided hands-on guidance to teachers, students, and parents throughout the year. "The results are a reflection of the hard work put in by the children and the steady support from their families," Nalatwada said, while wishing the top scorers a bright future.

To boost performance for the 2025-26 academic year, the education department launched targeted initiatives like the "40 Plus" and "29 Points" programs. These focused on ensuring students mastered the essential topics needed to pass, providing a safety net for those who were struggling. This strategic approach helped the Belgaum division clinch the top spot in the entire state this year.

Girish Padaki, a senior education official, expressed immense pride in the district's upward trend. The event was a heartfelt gathering of proud parents, dedicated teachers, and bright-eyed students. As the community celebrated these academic stars, the message was clear, with the right guidance and focused programs, every student in the district has the opportunity to succeed and shine.

Hubballi to clear footpaths in new drive

HUBBALLI

The Hubballi-Dharwad Municipal Corporation (HDMC) is set to launch a major crackdown on illegal structures. Following reports of growing obstacles on city walkways, officials have announced that the first phase of an eviction drive will reclaim space for pedestrians.

The operation will focus on busy commercial areas, specifically targeting the neighborhoods around Koppikar Road and Durgada Bail. For months, residents have complained that footpaths are blocked by temporary sheds, permanent building extensions, and street traders. While the city has issued warnings and collected fines in the past, many business owners simply returned to the sidewalks days later. This time, the Commissioner says the city is determined to find a "logical end" to the problem.

Beyond just clearing the way, the drive is part of a larger plan to beautify Hubballi and improve the flow of traffic. Narrowed streets caused by these encroachments have made driving and walking through the city center a daily struggle. By removing these barriers, the administration hopes to create a safer environment for everyone.

The Corporation has promised that this operation will be carried out fairly and without giving in to outside pressure. Local members have pledged their support, though many citizens are waiting to see if this cleanup will truly last. As the bulldozers prepare to move in tomorrow morning, the message to shopkeepers is clear, the sidewalks belong to the public.

FIFTEEN-YEAR DELAY ENDS

Authorities start clearing buildings for highway project

HAVERI

The long-standing dream of Byadgi residents is finally turning into reality as the district administration began a massive road-clearing operation. Led by District Magistrate Dr. Vijayamahantesh Danammanavar, over 10 JCBs and specialized machines moved into town to widen the crucial Gajendragad-Soraba state highway.

For fifteen years, this 850-meter stretch remained a bottleneck due to legal battles and disputes over building clearances. While the rest of the highway was completed, Byadgi suffered from severe traffic jams, especially during the busy chili trading season. Now, the administration is clearing 303 buildings to make way for a modern, wider road.

The project is backed by significant funding, with the APMC releasing ₹13 crore for construction and the government providing over ₹26 crore for compensation. So far, 120 building owners have accepted their payments, while the remaining funds will be deposited through the court to ensure the work continues without further delays. Tight police security was stationed throughout the area to ensure the demolition process remained peaceful.

Local MLA Basavaraj Shivannanavar praised the move, noting that the persistence of a local "struggle committee" was key to this success. Committee president Suresh Chalwadi expressed immense relief, noting that the narrow streets had caused endless headaches for decades. With buildings now coming down and the path finally clearing, Byadgi is ready to move toward a smoother, faster future for its travelers and traders alike.

Tragedy at hill temple as leopard kills boy

CHAMARAJANAGAR

A 10-year-old boy was killed by a leopard at Sri Male Mahadeshwara hill, sparking public outrage over inadequate safety measures and forest department negligence during pilgrimages.

A family's pilgrimage to the famous Sri Male Mahadeshwara hill turned into a nightmare when a leopard attacked and killed a 10-year-old boy. The victim, identified as Harshit from Bangalore, was walking toward Nagamale with his family when the predator struck. Sadly, the young boy died instantly at the scene.

The heartbreaking incident has sparked waves of shock and anger across the state. What was meant to be a spiritual journey ended in a preventable tragedy, leaving many to wonder how a child could be lost at such a popular holy site. Public outrage is growing as residents and visitors blame the government and Forest Department for failing to secure the busy footpath.

Critics argue that although wild animal sightings have increased lately, the authorities did not take enough action to protect the thousands of devotees who walk these trails. There are now urgent calls for the installation of CCTV cameras, better warning signs, and more forest guards to patrol the area, especially during evening hours.

"It is devastating that the system only wakes up after a life is lost," one witness remarked. The public is demanding immediate financial compensation for Harshit's grieving family and a permanent safety plan for the pilgrimage route. This tragedy serves as a grim reminder that protecting human life must be the top priority in areas where the forest and the public meet. For now, a heavy silence hangs over the hills as a community mourns.

He highlighted that while academic texts are essential, extracurricular interests like music and folk arts can also lead to professional degrees and successful careers.

During the event, the Registrar also praised the district as a cradle of folk culture, calling for the establishment of a dedicated Folk University in the region. Heart doctors and imaging experts now inseparable

MYSURU

The bond between heart care and medical imaging has never been stronger. At a recent medical conference in Mysuru, Dr. B. Dinesha, director of the Sri Jayadeva Institute, described cardiology and radiology as "first-degree relatives." He explained that these two fields now rely on each other completely to find and treat diseases.

Medical technology has come a long way, moving from basic X-rays to advanced MRI and CT scans. Today, doctors also use Artificial Intelligence (AI) to see inside the human body with incredible detail. Dr. Dinesha noted that radiology is no longer just about taking pictures, it is essential for almost every branch of medicine. In fact, most top medical journals now refuse to publish research unless it includes high-quality imaging as proof.

However, a major challenge remains. While big cities have the best technology, many poor and rural areas are left behind. Dr. Dinesha stressed that advanced tools like AI are only truly valuable if they can help everyone, regardless of their wealth. He also pointed out a massive shortage of experts, noting that India has only 20,000 registered radiologists to serve over 1.5 billion people.

Chikkamagaluru Woman Loses Lakhs in Silent Scam

CHIKKAMAGALURU

A terrifying new form of cybercrime has surfaced in Chikkamagaluru, where a local woman lost ₹18.24 lakh without ever clicking a link or sharing a password. Unlike typical scams, the victim received no suspicious "APK" files and never shared an OTP, yet her savings vanished in stages over several weeks.

The fraud took place between March 4 and April 21, but the woman only discovered the theft during a routine bank check. Fraudsters managed to move the money from her private bank account to various unknown digital wallets and accounts across the country. Because no alert messages or OTPs were sent to her phone, she had no idea her account was being bled dry.

This case has sent shockwaves through the district, as it bypasses the usual safety warnings people are taught to follow.

Local police have registered the case and are currently conducting a technical investigation to trace where the money landed.

Since January, the district has seen 29 cybercrime cases, with victims losing a total of nearly ₹5 crore to various online scams.Cyber Police officials are now warning the public that staying safe requires more than just hiding your OTP.

They recommend checking bank statements frequently and immediately reporting any tiny, unauthorized transaction to the 1930 helpline. As hackers find ways to bypass traditional alerts, authorities are urging citizens to remain hyper-vigilant about their digital footprints and bank activity.

CHIKKAMAGALURU

Residents of Bidre village near Balehonnur were gripped by "cobra fever" after three massive snakes were discovered in three neighboring houses simultaneously. The reptiles, seeking relief from the summer heat, had made themselves a bit too comfortable in local chicken coops.

These weren't just passing through, they were there for a feast: Faced with three venomous predators, the terrified families called in local reptile expert Albert from Bananahonnur. Albert conducted a meticulous two-and-a-half-hour operation to safely capture the trio.

"I caught one female and two male cobras in total," Albert explained. "The female had been spotted coming and going for a week, and we managed to preserve her 21 eggs as well."

Once secured, the snakes were transported away from the village and released into the Elekallu reserve forest. Thanks to the expert's quick work, the village is now snake-free, and the cobras and their eggs, have been given a second chance in the wild.

RURAL HIGH SCHOOLS NOW UPGRADED TO COLLEGES

MYSURU

In a major boost for rural education, the state government has officially upgraded high schools in Salundi and Kasuvinahalli into pre-university (PU) colleges. This move is designed to bring higher education directly to the doorsteps of village students, ensuring they no longer have to travel long distances to continue their studies.The initiative follows a promise made by Chief Minister Siddaramaiah in the recent budget to upgrade 23 state schools. For now, these new colleges will focus on the commerce stream. Students can enroll to study subjects like accountancy, business studies, and computer science. This change is particularly meaningful for female students in the region, as having a college nearby removes the safety concerns and high costs associated with traveling to distant towns. To qualify for this upgrade, the schools had to meet strict rules. They needed at least 40 graduating students and had to be located in areas where no other government college existed within a 15-kilometer radius.

Kolar voters question local leader for low activity

Kolar voters express frustration with MP Mallesh Babu, criticizing his perceived inactivity and lack of grassroots engagement since election.

KOLAR

The political atmosphere in Kolar has turned tense as residents and party members begin to openly question the performance of MP Mallesh Babu. While he won his seat through a major alliance between the JDS and BJP, recent online debates suggest that his own supporters are feeling neglected just a short time into his term.Critics have taken to social media to voice their frustrations, claiming that Mallesh Babu has been largely absent from the hard work of building the party. According to local reports, members are upset that the MP rarely holds political meetings or organizes grassroots events. Instead, they allege his public appearances are mostly limited to attending private social functions and weddings, rather than solving the urgent problems of the district.The situation is further complicated by comparisons to the former MP, S. Mangaluru launches a ₹3.5 crore park project near Kadri, featuring modern amenities, dedicated parking, and sustainable water recycling systems.

NEW KADRI PARK PROJECT BOOSTS LOCAL RECREATION

KADRI

Mangaluru is preparing for a major green transformation as a new ₹3.5 crore public park project takes flight under the AMRUT scheme. The second park will be built on 3.5 acres of land directly across from the popular Kadri Park. This development aims to create a fresh recreational hub while solving long-standing issues like traffic and parking in the city center.Currently, the original 17-acre Kadri Park is the city's primary destination for nature lovers. However, its popularity has led to crowded streets and a lack of space for visitor vehicles. The new addition will feature modern walking tracks, lush gardens, and a small open-air stage for community events. Most importantly, it will include a dedicated parking area to ease the congestion that often clogs local roads during weekends and holidays.Water management is another key focus of this ambitious plan. To keep both parks green during the dry summer months, officials will reuse treated water from the nearby Bendorewell treatment plant. A massive 70-lakh-litre tank will be built to store this recycled water, ensuring the gardens stay vibrant without draining the city's drinking supply.

Top officials, including District Commissioner Darshan, recently inspected the site to finalize the blueprint. Local committee members believe this expansion will turn the Kadri area into a premier cultural and relaxation zone. By combining modern amenities with eco-friendly water solutions, the project promises to give Mangaluru residents a beautiful, sustainable space to breathe, walk, and gather.

Bantwal woman saves family pottery using support

BANTWAL

By reviving her family's ancestral pottery trade, she has transitioned from a computer operator to a successful business owner, inspiring countless rural women along the way.

Prachina's journey began after the pandemic forced her and her husband, Jagannath, to return to their home village. Faced with an uncertain future, she remembered the grit of her mother, Leelavathi, who once sold clay pots door-to-door to fund her children's education. Determined to keep that legacy alive, Prachina decided to turn the humble craft into a professional venture.The turning point came when she joined a local self-help group. Through the Umamaheshwari Sneha Sanjeevini Sangha, she accessed an initial loan of ₹50,000 to jumpstart her work. As her beautiful clay products gained popularity, she secured a larger loan of ₹1.5 lakh to open her own store, "Amulya." Today, her business flourishes at temple festivals and village fairs across Dakshina Kannada.

Beyond pottery, Prachina is a multi-talented entrepreneur who has mastered tailoring and serves as a "Pashu Sakhi" for her community. HONNAVAR

The dramatic afternoon chase took place near Nelavanki, proving that quick public reporting combined with rapid police response can lead to instant justice.

The incident began around 4:00 pm when a woman was walking along the roadside. Suddenly, two men on a motorcycle zoomed past and grabbed a gold chain from her neck. As the thieves sped away, the woman's cries for help caught the attention of a nearby local youth. Although the brave young man could not physically stop the fleeing bike, he kept a sharp eye on the suspects, memorizing their clothing and the specific details of their motorcycle.

Armed with this precise description, the police immediately launched a "nakabandi" operation, setting up roadblocks at key locations across the taluk. The strategy worked perfectly. Manipal Tech College makes big history

MANIPAL

In a groundbreaking move for Indian education, the Manipal Institute of Technology (MIT) has officially become the first engineering college in the country to be recognized by the global CFA Institute. This prestigious honor marks a major shift in how future engineers are trained to handle the complex world of money and technology.

The official certificate was presented during a special ceremony held on May 6. Top leaders from the CFA Institute joined the Registrar of MAHE and the Director of MIT to celebrate this achievement. This partnership is not just a title, it opens doors for students to access world-class study guides, valuable scholarships, and connections with financial experts across the globe.

Railway Police catch suspected burglar with gold

Mangaluru Railway Police arrested a Kasaragod man with gold worth ₹13 lakh, identifying him as a repeat offender involved in a recent Thrissur house robbery.

MANGALURU

The Railway Protection Force (RPF) made a major breakthrough by arresting a suspected professional thief at the Mangaluru Central Railway Station. The suspect, identified as 25-year-old Ashif P.H. from Kasaragod, was found carrying a stash of gold jewelry worth over ₹13 lakh.

Officers on duty became suspicious when they noticed the young man wandering aimlessly around the station premises while clutching a bag. When security personnel stopped him for questioning, he could not provide any legal documents for the nearly 94 grams of gold found inside. The seized treasure included a variety of items such as bangles, necklaces, rings, and earrings.During a quick interrogation, Ashif reportedly confessed that the ornaments were the result of a recent house robbery in Thrissur, Kerala. Further background checks revealed a long criminal history. Police discovered that the suspect is allegedly linked to multiple burglaries across several districts, including Ernakulam. In fact, several courts had already issued warrants for his arrest due to past crimes.

"His nervous behavior gave him away," a railway official explained. Once the RPF confirmed his identity and the stolen nature of the goods, they coordinated with neighboring authorities. The suspect has now been handed over to the Kerala police for a more detailed investigation. This arrest is being hailed as a win for railway security, as it removed a seasoned criminal from the tracks and recovered valuable property belonging to a family in distress.

Vitla Police seize massive illegal rice haul

VITLA

Authorities took swift action against the illegal storage of government supplies by raiding a home in Shivajinagar. In a joint operation, the Food Department and local police seized nearly 680 kilograms of ration rice that was hidden inside a parked vehicle. One local man was arrested at the scene for his involvement in the crime.

The crackdown began after officials received a secret tip-off about rice from the Public Distribution System (PDS) being hoarded illegally. When officers arrived at the village house on Sunday, they discovered fifteen large plastic sacks stuffed into an autorickshaw. The vehicle, parked on the private property, was being used as a temporary warehouse for the stolen goods, which were meant for families in need.

Police identified the arrested man as 40-year-old Ali Akbar. According to investigators, the suspect admitted to stocking the bags without any legal permission. The total haul weighed exactly 679.38 kilograms, with an estimated market value of over ₹23,000. Officers promptly confiscated the rice and the vehicle used to hide it, marking a victory against local black-market activities.

A formal case has been filed under the Essential Commodities Act at the Vitla Police Station. While the suspect is currently in custody, investigators are working to find out exactly where the rice came from and who else might be helping him. This raid serves as a strong warning that government resources meant for the poor must not be diverted for private profit.

Savadi promises full irrigation for Adahallatti village

ATHANI

Farmers in Adahallatti village have a reason to celebrate as MLA Lakshman Savadi announced a massive push to bring the entire region under irrigation. Speaking at a ceremony near Hipperagi Tota School, Savadi laid the foundation for a new bridge-cum-barrage, a critical project costing ₹2.50 crore that will help manage water and improve local travel.

The MLA highlighted that his primary goal is to transform the Athani constituency through farmer-friendly policies. He explained that by combining the existing tank-filling schemes with the active Kotalagi Ammajeswari project, Adahallatti will soon achieve 100% irrigation coverage. This ensures that every field in the village will have a reliable water source, significantly boosting crop yields and rural income.

Beyond water, Savadi revealed a broader plan for local infrastructure. Starting this June, a major road paving project connecting Yalihadalagi to the Sindhoor border will begin at a cost of ₹8.5 crore. Additionally, ₹50 lakh has been sanctioned for a new community hall at the Basaveshwara temple, fulfilling a long-standing request from the villagers.

Local leaders and farmers praised the swift action, noting that these projects address problems that have persisted for years. During the event, which was attended by irrigation officials and community elders, Savadi reaffirmed his commitment to basic needs like better schools and clean drinking water. With these multi-crore investments, Adahallatti is set to move away from water scarcity and toward a future of agricultural plenty and modern connectivity.

GUWAHATI

Himanta Biswa Sarma on Sunday thanked the people of Assam for giving a strong mandate to the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance and said the new government would continue working for peace, development, and prosperity in the state.

Addressing party workers and leaders at the BJP headquarters in Guwahati, Sarma said the election victory reflected the people's confidence in the development policies implemented under the leadership of Prime Minister Narendra Modi.

After discussing various issues, we have once again received the blessings of the people. The government has worked with commitment and dedication for the welfare and development of Assam. The people have blessed us for taking the state forward on the path of progress, Sarma said after the legislature party meeting.

He further stated that the BJP-led administration had brought major improvements in governance, infrastructure, and stability across Assam during the past several years. According to Sarma, the government's continued focus on development and law and order had strengthened public trust in the ruling alliance.

The people of Assam have given us their blessings because this government has taken the state towards rapid development and stability. We assure the people that under the leadership of Prime Minister Narendra Modi, we will continue to work tirelessly for the progress of Assam, he added.

Sarma is scheduled to take oath as the Chief Minister of Assam for a second consecutive term on May 12. With the latest electoral victory, the Bharatiya Janata Party will form the government in Assam for the third straight term, further strengthening its political position in the northeastern region of the country.

Earlier in the day, J. P. Nadda formally announced Sarma's name as the leader of the BJP Legislature Party after a meeting attended by newly elected MLAs and NDA alliance partners.

The BJP's alliance partners, including the Asom Gana Parishad and the Bodoland People's Front, extended their support to Sarma as the NDA leader in the state.

Several senior BJP leaders attended the legislature party meeting, including Nayab Singh Saini. The gathering highlighted the party's confidence in Sarma's leadership ahead of the formation of the new government.

Assam Cong has become minority-dominated party: Borah

Composition of Cong legislators in Assembly reflected the changing nature of the party

GUWAHATI

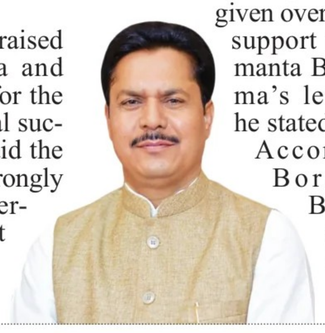
Bhupen Borah on Sunday alleged that the Indian National Congress in Assam has transformed into a minority-dominated political party under the influence of Dhubri MP Rakibul Hussain.

Speaking to reporters in Assam, Borah said the composition of Congress legislators in the state Assembly reflected the changing nature of the party. According to him, almost all Congress MLAs elected in the recent elections belong to the minority community, except for one legislator.

Except for one MLA, all Congress legislators elected to the Assembly belong to the minority community. This clearly shows the direction in which the Congress party in Assam is heading, Borah said during the media interaction.

Bhupen Borah himself was earlier associated with the Congress party and had served as president of the Assam Pradesh Congress Committee before joining the Bharatiya Janata Party ahead of the Assembly elections. Contesting on a BJP ticket, he won the Bihpuria Assembly constituency in the latest polls.

The BJP leader also praised Himanta Biswa Sarma and credited his leadership for the BJP's continued electoral success in Assam. Borah said the people of the state had strongly supported Sarma's governance and development agenda.Referring to recent political developments, Borah said he had earlier predicted that certain realities within the Congress party would become clear after the elections, although many people initially doubted his claims.After what people witnessed recently about Rakibul Hussain's control over the Congress party in Assam, all doubts among the people of the state have disappeared. Moreover, the people have given overwhelming support to Dr Himanta Biswa Sarma's leadership, he stated.



According to Borah, the BJP-led government in Assam was formed with the aspirations and blessings of the people, and the party would continue strengthening its organisational base and governance initiatives across the state.

The people of Assam voted with hope and faith in the BJP-led government. From today, that journey will become even stronger, he added.

The remarks come at a politically significant time, as the BJP prepares to form the government in Assam for a third consecutive term following its recent electoral victory. Political observers believe the statements are part of the continuing political contest between the BJP and Congress over identity politics, governance, and voter representation in the northeastern state.

Adhikari initiates major bureaucratic reshuffle in CMO

KOLKATA

Less than 24 hours after taking oath as the ninth Chief Minister of West Bengal, Suvendu Adhikari carried out a major overhaul of the bureaucratic structure within the Chief Minister's Office at the state secretariat.

According to official sources, as many as 16 bureaucrats attached to the earlier Chief Minister's Office were replaced with new officers soon after the formation of the new government. Among the most notable changes was the transfer of Santanu Mukhopadhya, a 2014-batch IAS officer considered a close confidant of Mamata Banerjee.

Another significant transfer involved Pratap Nayek, who was associated with the previous CMO and also held influence within the Trinamool Congress-affiliated West Bengal Government Employees' Federation. Nayek has reportedly been transferred to the Palbazar Block Development Office at Bijanbari in Darjeeling district.

In another major administrative move, around 46 officers who had been serving as principal secretaries to ministers in the earlier cabinet were temporarily placed under the state Personnel and Administrative Reforms Department. Government officials stated that their future postings would be decided later.

'16 bureaucrats attached to the earlier CMO were replaced with new officers soon after the formation of new govt'

On Saturday, shortly after Adhikari's swearing-in ceremony, retired IAS officer Subrata Gupta was appointed as adviser to the Chief Minister. Gupta had earlier served as a special poll observer appointed by the Election Commission of India during the recently concluded West Bengal Assembly elections and had received appreciation for his role during the electoral process.

The state government also appointed Subrata Bala, a 2017-batch IAS officer, as Principal Secretary to the Chief Minister. Before the appointment, Bala was serving as Additional District Magistrate of South 24 Parganas district.Meanwhile, significant changes were also introduced within the Kolkata Police. Authorities transferred 93 police officers from various ranks, including sub-inspectors, inspectors, assistant commissioners, and deputy commissioners, out of Kolkata police jurisdiction.

Most of the transferred officers were reportedly associated with the Trinamool Congress-linked Police Welfare Association. The officers have been posted to several districts across the state, including Cooch Behar, Kalimpong, Jalpaiguri, Bankura, and Purulia, among others.

Political observers believe the sweeping administrative changes signal the new government's attempt to restructure the state bureaucracy and establish a fresh administrative setup aligned with the priorities of the new leadership.

Mamata's political era in Bengal is over: Samik Bhattacharya

KOLKATA

Samik Bhattacharya on Sunday launched a strong political attack on former West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee, claiming that her political era in the state had ended permanently and that no future alliance could restore her to power.

Speaking to reporters, Bhattacharya said Mamata Banerjee was free to travel wherever she wished but insisted that her political influence in West Bengal had effectively come to an end.

She can go to the Moon, she can go to Antarctica, she is free to go anywhere; it is her vacation, Bhattacharya remarked while commenting on the former Chief Minister's political future.

The BJP leader credited the rise of the Bharatiya Janata Party in West Bengal to years of struggle and sacrifice by party workers across the country.

He said BJP supporters had long dreamed of establishing a government inspired by Syama Prasad Mukherjee in his home state.

Every worker of the Bharatiya Janata Party, from Kashmir to Kanyakumari, carrying the BJP flag, had this dream in their hearts that a government inspired by Syama Prasad Mukherjee should be formed in the land of Syama Prasad Mukherjee, Bhattacharya said.

He further claimed that the BJP's political success in the state came through the sacrifices of party workers, alleging that 321 workers had lost their lives during years of political conflict and struggle in the state.

Settlers force reburial of Palestinian man

ASASA

Israeli settlers in the occupied West Bank forced Palestinians to exhume the body of their father from his freshly dug village grave, his family said, near a settlement re-established by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's government. Hussein Asasa (80), died on Friday of natural causes and was buried that evening at the cemetery of Asasa village near Jenin, with all the necessary permits from Israel's military, whose forces were at the site, his son Mohammed said. But shortly after the burial, the family was called back by some of the villagers, who said settlers were at the grave, ordering the grave be dug up.

Volcano eruption: 2 Singaporeans confirmed dead

JAKARTA

Two Singaporean nationals missing for days were confirmed dead on Sunday from the eruption of Mount Dukono on Indonesia's Halmahera island, the local rescue agency said. escuers found the bodies around the crater rim, and evacuation was under way, agency head Iwan Ramdani told Reuters. Some 150 personnel with two thermal drones have been deployed since Sunday morning, Iwan said, with the focus of the search around 100-150 metres (350-500 feet) of the crater rim. Mount Dukono in North Maluku province bordering the Pacific Ocean began erupting on Friday, spewing ash as high as 10 km (6 miles).

Russia-Ukraine war is coming to an end: Putin

MOSCOW

Russian President Vladimir Putin said on Saturday that he thought the Ukraine war was coming to an end, remarks that came just hours after he had vowed victory in Ukraine at Moscow's most scaled-back Victory Day parade in years. I think that the matter is coming to an end, Putin told reporters of the Russia-Ukraine war, Europe's deadliest conflict since World War Two. He also said he would be willing to negotiate new security arrangements for Europe, and that his preferred negotiating partner would be Germany's former Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder. Russia's 2022 invasion of Ukraine triggered the most serious crisis in relations between Russia and the West since the 1962 Cuban Missile Crisis, when many people feared the world was on the brink of nuclear war.

Magyar sworn in as Hungary's PM

Magyar defeated nationalist Orban after 16 years in power in an April 12 election landslide.

BUDAPEST

Centre-right leader Peter Magyar was officially sworn in as Hungary's new prime minister on Saturday, marking a dramatic political shift after defeating long-serving nationalist leader Viktor Orban in a landslide election victory last month.

Peter Magyar (45) took office with strong public backing after his Tisza party secured a constitutional majority in the April 12 parliamentary elections. The victory ended Viktor Orban's 16-year rule, which had been marked by growing criticism from European allies, concerns over democratic backsliding, and increasing economic difficulties within the country.

During his swearing-in ceremony, Magyar promised sweeping reforms aimed at rebuilding Hungary's democratic institutions and restoring confidence among both citizens and international partners.

Addressing supporters, he declared that the Hungarian people had given his government a clear mandate to open a new chapter in the nation's history and to fundamentally change the political system. Magyar's election victory has already had a noticeable impact on financial markets. Foreign investors responded positively to the change in leadership, with Hungary's currency, the forint, reaching four-year highs against the euro. Government bond yields also declined, reflecting growing optimism about the country's economic future and expectations of closer cooperation with the European Union.Political analysts say Magyar now faces enormous pressure to deliver quick results.

One of his biggest challenges will be securing billions of euros in suspended European Union funds that were withheld due to concerns about governance and rule-of-law issues under the previous administration. Those funds are considered crucial for stimulating economic growth, stabilising public finances, and improving investor confidence.Hungary has faced years of economic stagnation, rising living costs, and strained diplomatic relations with several Western allies. Many voters viewed the election as an opportunity for change after what critics described as increasing centralisation of power during Orban's leadership.

Despite the celebratory atmosphere surrounding his inauguration, experts warn that Magyar's political honeymoon may not last long. His government will be closely watched both domestically and internationally as it begins implementing reforms and attempts to balance economic recovery with political transformation.

The new PM has pledged transparency, stronger democratic institutions, and renewed engagement with European partners, signalling a potentially significant shift in Hungary's domestic and foreign policy direction.

Iran denies reports of oil leak near Kharg

TEHRAN

Company denied reports of an oil leak near Kharg Island on Sunday, according to state media, after satellite imagery this week appeared to show a large slick west of the country's main oil export hub in the Gulf.

The company's chief executive said inspections had found no evidence of leaks from storage tanks, pipelines, loading facilities or tankers operating near the island.

The official said Iranian teams had conducted additional field inspections and laboratory testing after the reports emerged and had not identified "even the smallest trace" of leakage.

Pak car bomb attack kills 14 police officers

ISLAMABAD

At least 14 police officers were killed in a deadly militant attack in northwestern Pakistan after a car bomb struck a police outpost and gunmen launched an ambush on responding security personnel, authorities said on Sunday.

The attack took place on Saturday in the northwestern region of Bannu, an area that has witnessed repeated militant violence in recent years. According to police officials, the assault began when attackers rammed an explosives-laden vehicle into a police post, causing a massive explosion that destroyed much of the structure.

Images released after the incident showed the police outpost reduced to rubble, with shattered bricks, burned debris, and heavily damaged vehicles scattered across the area. Rescue workers worked through the wreckage for hours to recover victims trapped beneath the collapsed building.

Police official Sajjad Khan confirmed in a statement that the bodies of 14 officers had been recovered from the destroyed outpost. He added that three surviving personnel were rescued alive and immediately transported to nearby hospitals for emergency treatment.

A separate police official, speaking on condition of anonymity because he was not authorised to brief the media, said the attackers stormed the premises after the explosion and opened fire on any officers who survived the initial blast. Security personnel from nearby areas were later dispatched to assist the targeted police unit, but militants reportedly launched a second ambush against the reinforcements.

Other law enforcement personnel were sent to help the police, but the terrorists ambushed them and caused some casualties, the official said.

Police sources further revealed that the militants may have used drones during the coordinated assault, highlighting an increasingly sophisticated level of planning and tactics by armed groups operating in the region. Authorities have not yet identified which militant organisation carried out the attack, although investigations are underway.

Emergency services and ambulances from civil hospitals and rescue agencies were immediately mobilised following the attack. Officials declared a state of emergency in government hospitals across Bannu to ensure rapid treatment for the injured.

The latest incident underscores the growing security challenges facing Pakistan, particularly in the northwestern provinces bordering Afghanistan. In recent months, militant attacks targeting police stations, military installations, and security convoys have increased, raising concerns over regional stability and the safety of law enforcement personnel.Authorities have launched a search operation in the surrounding areas while security has been tightened across the district to prevent further attacks.

Trump awaits Iran's response amid relative calm in Hormuz

CAIRO

The fragile calm in the Strait of Hormuz comes after weeks of escalating tensions that have disrupted regional stability and fuelled fears of a wider conflict in the Middle East.

The narrow waterway, through which a significant portion of the world's oil supply passes, has remained under close international watch as hostilities between Iran and U.S.-allied forces continued to threaten global energy markets.U.S. Secretary of State Marco Rubio said on Friday that Washington expected Tehran to respond within hours to its latest diplomatic proposal.

The offer is designed to formally end the ongoing war before broader negotiations begin on sensitive issues, including Iran's nuclear program and regional security concerns.

Despite those expectations, there were no immediate signs of movement from Iranian officials over the weekend.

Analysts believe Tehran may still be weighing the political and strategic consequences of accepting the proposal, particularly amid domestic pressure and regional uncertainty.Meanwhile, Rubio held talks in Miami on Saturday with Mohammed bin Abdulrahman al-Thani, focusing on efforts to maintain stability in the Middle East. According to a statement from the U.S. State Department, both leaders discussed the importance of continued cooperation to

Washington has been awaiting Tehran's response to a new proposal for a deal to end the war, reopen the Strait to shipping deter threats and promote regional security. However, the statement made no direct mention of Iran or the proposed peace framework.

Further attention was drawn to the issue after French broadcaster LCI journalist Margot Haddad reported that U.S. President Donald Trump told her in a brief interview that he expected Iran's answer very soon. Trump is scheduled to travel to China later this week, increasing pressure on Washington to stabilise the situation before high-level international meetings.

The prolonged conflict has already contributed to a growing global energy crisis, with oil prices remaining volatile due to fears of supply disruptions through the Strait of Hormuz. Economists warn that any further escalation could severely impact international trade, inflation rates, and economic growth worldwide.

Although the reduction in hostilities has provided temporary relief, uncertainty continues to dominate diplomatic circles as the world waits for Tehran's next move. International observers believe the coming days could prove critical in determining whether the region moves toward peace negotiations or faces renewed confrontation.

ISRAELI STRIKES IN GAZA KILL 3 AMID FRAGILE TRUCE TENSIONS

CAIRO

At least three Palestinians, including two members of the Hamas-run police force, were killed in Israeli air strikes across the Gaza Strip on Sunday, according to local health officials.

The latest violence highlighted the continuing instability in the region despite a U.S.-brokered ceasefire that has remained under strain since it took effect in October 2025.

Medical officials in Gaza Strip said one person was killed in an air strike targeting the Maghazi Refugee Camp. In a separate strike in Khan Younis, the head of the Hamas-run criminal police force, Wessam Abdel-Hadi, and one of his aides were killed, according to Gaza's interior ministry.

The ministry, which is administered by Hamas, condemned the attacks and accused Israel of continuing to target civilian and administrative structures within Gaza. Israeli authorities did not immediately comment on the reported incidents.

The renewed strikes come amid ongoing tensions despite the ceasefire agreement brokered by the United States in late 2025.

Although the truce significantly reduced the scale of fighting following months of devastating conflict, violence has continued across Gaza with near-daily military operations and sporadic clashes.

Israeli officials have long argued that Hamas uses civilian institutions and infrastructure to support militant activities, an accusation Hamas denies.

According to local medics in Gaza, at least 850 Palestinians have been killed since the ceasefire came into effect in October 2025. Israeli authorities, meanwhile, say militant attacks during the same period have killed four Israeli soldiers.

The continued exchanges have raised concerns among international observers that the ceasefire remains highly fragile and could collapse if hostilities escalate further.

Both Israel and Hamas have repeatedly accused each other of violating the agreement, with each side blaming the other for provoking renewed violence.

Humanitarian conditions in Gaza also remain severe, with many residents continuing to face shortages of food, medicine, electricity, and shelter following months of conflict and destruction. International aid agencies have repeatedly called for sustained calm and unrestricted humanitarian access to prevent further deterioration of conditions in the territory.

Spain starts evacuating hantavirus-hit cruise ship in Tenerife

MADRID

Spanish authorities on Sunday launched the evacuation process for passengers aboard the luxury cruise ship MV Hondius after a hantavirus outbreak was detected on the vessel anchored near Tenerife. The evacuation operation began early Sunday under the supervision of Spain's Health Ministry and emergency response teams. According to government officials, Spanish nationals are being prioritised in the first phase of the evacuation and will disembark in small groups using separate boats to minimise contact and maintain strict health controls.

After reaching shore near Tenerife, passengers will be transferred directly onto specially arranged buses and taken to the local airport. Officials stated that those evacuated will then board a Spanish military aircraft bound for Madrid. Authorities stressed that passengers would remain isolated throughout the process and would not come into contact with the general public.The cruise ship, MV Hondius, departed from the coast of Cape Verde on Wednesday after international health agencies requested Spain's assistance in managing the situation. The decision followed confirmation of a hantavirus outbreak onboard the vessel, raising concerns among European and global health authorities.The World Health Organization and the European Union reportedly urged Spain to coordinate the evacuation due to the ship's proximity to the Canary Islands and the need for rapid containment measures.Europe's public health agency issued a rapid scientific advisory late Saturday, classifying all passengers aboard the vessel as high-risk contacts as a precautionary measure.

'Russian drone strikes continue despite US-brokered ceasefire'

MOSCOW

Ukrainian officials on Sunday reported continued Russian drone strikes and intense battlefield clashes despite a recently announced U.S.-brokered ceasefire between Kyiv and Moscow.

According to Ukrainian authorities, nearly 150 battlefield clashes were recorded over the past 24 hours even after the temporary ceasefire agreement came into effect.

The truce, announced by Donald Trump on Friday, was intended to last from May 9 to May 11 as part of wider efforts to revive stalled peace negotiations between Russia and Ukraine.

In the northeastern Kharkiv Oblast region, Governor Oleh Syniehubov said Russian drone attacks injured eight people, including two children.

Emergency services responded to several damaged residential areas following the overnight strikes.Further south, in the Kherson Oblast region, Governor Oleksandr Prokudin reported that seven people, including a child, were wounded by Russian drone and artillery attacks since early Saturday.

HISTORIC WIN

Australian far-right party wins first lower house seat

SYDNEY

Australia's right-wing populist One Nation party has secured its first seat in the country's lower house, marking a significant political breakthrough as it intensifies its campaign against mass migration and rising living costs.

Farmer David Farley won the rural seat of Farrer in Saturday's by-election, giving One Nation its first representation in the House of Representatives. The electorate is located around 550 kilometres south of Sydney and was previously held by the conservative Liberal Party.

Although the by-election result does not threaten the parliamentary majority of centre-left Prime Minister Anthony Albanese and his Australian Labor Party government, political analysts say the outcome represents a major symbolic victory for One Nation. The party already holds four seats in the Senate and has recently gained momentum in national opinion polls.

One Nation, led by Senator Pauline Hanson, has increasingly positioned itself as a populist alternative to Australia's mainstream conservative coalition. The party has adopted hardline policies on immigration, climate measures, and economic issues, often drawing comparisons to the political approach of Donald Trump in the United States.

Following the victory, Hanson posted a message on social media promising that the party would continue fighting for Australians on issues such as rising living costs, opposition to net-zero climate policies, and reducing migration levels.

Immigration has become an increasingly sensitive political issue in Australia, where approximately half of the nation's 27 million residents were either born overseas or have at least one parent born abroad.

Concerns over housing shortages, infrastructure pressure, and the rising cost of living have fueled debates over migration levels in recent years.

Air India has dismissed more than 1,000 employees in the past three years for ethical violations, Chief Executive Officer Campbell Wilson said. Speaking at a staff town hall meeting on Friday, he stated that several workers were removed for misusing the airline's employee leisure travel system and other rule violations. Wilson stressed that employees must follow ethical practices even when nobody is watching. He also noted that hundreds of workers lose their jobs annually due to non-compliance with company policies. His remarks came as Air India continues cost-cutting measures while facing financial challenges and operational pressures.

₹20,000 cr mission launched for nuclear energy push

India aims to expand nuclear power capacity significantly by 2047 to strengthen clean energy supply and energy security nationwide.

NEW DELHI

India is preparing for a monumental expansion of its nuclear energy sector, aiming to fill the massive gap in its current power grid.

According to a new report by Morgan Stanley, nuclear energy presently accounts for a mere 2% of India's installed capacity and 3% of its total power generation. This "under-penetration" is now being viewed as a major opportunity for growth.

The government has set ambitious milestones, targeting 22 GW of nuclear power by 2032 and a long-term goal of 100 GW by 2047. To kickstart this, a dedicated Nuclear Energy Mission has been launched with a ₹20,000 crore (Rs 200 billion) fund. This investment focuses on the design and deployment of Small Modular Reactors (SMRs), which are more flexible and scalable than traditional large-scale plants.

A significant shift is also happening in policy. Under the proposed "SHANTI" framework, the government aims to modernize regulations to allow private companies to participate in nuclear projects for the first time. Experts believe that for this strategy to succeed, India must secure its supply chains and strengthen global partnerships. Currently, Canada plays a vital role by supplying uranium under a long-term agreement, while the U.S. is expected to provide critical reactor technology and equipment.

As India positions itself as a global clean energy hub, the move toward nuclear is seen as a "strategic complement" to solar and wind. Unlike renewables, nuclear provides steady "base-load" power without the price swings associated with fossil fuels. While challenges in financing and liability reforms remain, the government's push marks a decisive turn toward a low-carbon future.

John Furner hails India's rising startup ecosystem

NEW DELHI

Walmart President and CEO John Furner signaled a massive vote of confidence in India's economy this Sunday, meeting with rising entrepreneurs to discuss the future of digital commerce. During high-level talks, Furner described India as an engine for global growth and expressed excitement over the "ambition" of local founders building high-tech consumer brands. The interaction included founders from sectors such as beauty, pet care, apparel, and food and beverages. The goal was to explore how Indian brands can leverage digital marketplaces like Flipkart to scale domestically and enter international markets. Furner noted that the focus on quality and innovation among Indian startups makes them suitable for Walmart's global supply chain. Flipkart CEO Kalyan Krishnamurthy said entrepreneurs have a deeper understanding of consumer needs and see digital platforms as tools for business growth. Manish Joneja of Walmart Marketplace said emerging brands combine innovation with digital agility. Walmart aims to provide market access and training support programs.

Indian oil companies absorb massive losses to maintain stable fuel prices amid global crude oil price volatility.

Indian oil firms bear heavy cost to stabilize prices

NEW DELHI

State-owned oil companies in India are absorbing massive financial losses to keep domestic fuel prices stable amid global energy volatility triggered by conflict in the Middle East.

Companies such as Indian Oil Corporation, Bharat Petroleum Corporation Limited, and Hindustan Petroleum Corporation Limited are collectively spending around Rs 1,700 crore per day to shield consumers from sharp increases in petrol, diesel, and cooking gas prices.

According to reports, global crude oil prices have surged significantly over the past ten weeks. While several countries have responded by increasing fuel prices or rationing supplies, India has chosen to maintain retail price stability to protect consumers from inflationary pressure.

This policy, however, has come at a steep cost. In just two and a half months, these oil marketing companies are estimated to have incurred losses exceeding Rs 1 lakh crore due to what are known as "under-recoveries"—the gap between the actual cost of procurement and the regulated selling price.

Energy experts warn that such sustained losses could place severe financial strain on these public sector firms. While they continue to ensure uninterrupted fuel supply across the country, concerns are rising over their long-term financial health and liquidity.

Despite the mounting pressure, the companies have continued to maintain stable retail pricing, preventing a direct impact on households and transportation costs. This has helped cushion consumers from global shocks but has shifted the burden onto the energy sector.

FACT-FILE

- Oil firms absorb huge losses
- Fuel prices remain unchanged in India
- Global crude crisis drives costs higher
- Under-recoveries strain public sector companies
- Consumers protected from price hikes

Analysts note that India's approach highlights a policy choice prioritising price stability and inflation control over immediate cost pass-through. However, they caution that prolonged under-recoveries may eventually require government intervention or policy adjustments to ensure the sustainability of the fuel distribution system.

India's hospital sector enters decade-long growth cycle

NEW DELHI

India's healthcare landscape is undergoing a massive transformation, shifting from a focus on high-cost treatments to a high-volume growth model. A new report by brokerage firm Mirae Asset Sharekhan suggests that the hospital sector is entering a sustained "expansion cycle" that will last well beyond 2030, driven by a desperate need for more hospital beds and a surge in digital health technology.

SCALE OF SECTOR'S GROWTH

- Market value: The hospital market reached $193.4 billion in FY25 and is projected to skyrocket to $364.6 billion by 2034.
- The bed gap: India currently has only 1.3 beds per 1,000 people, far below the global median of 2.9. This "underpenetration" means that even as hospitals build thousands of new beds, they are being filled almost immediately.
- Utilization: Leading chains like Apollo Hospitals are already seeing occupancy rates near 70%, a clear sign that demand is outpacing supply.

A stronger financial foundation

Unlike previous expansion phases that left hospitals deeply in debt, the current cycle is backed by strong balance sheets. After five years of focusing on efficiency and reducing debt, hospital chains have cut their leverage significantly. FY25 marks the start of a "meaningful capex" (capital expenditure) phase, where hospitals are finally ready to spend big on new buildings and medical tech without risking financial ruin.

While challenges like talent shortages and regulatory price caps remain, the report concludes that the sector offers a rare combination of necessity and scale. For investors and patients alike, the next decade promises a more integrated, tech-savvy, and accessible healthcare system across the country.

What is driving the boom?

- Rising insurance: Private insurance now accounts for up to 43% of revenue for major chains like Max Healthcare, moving away from "out-of-pocket" payments.
- AI revolution: Hospitals are aggressively adopting AI diagnostics and teleconsultations to increase efficiency and reach patients in smaller towns.
- Government schemes: Initiatives like Ayushman Bharat are opening doors in Tier-2 and Tier-3 cities, significantly increasing patient volume.
- Medical tourism: High-margin revenue from international patients continues to be a major profit driver for city-based hospital hubs.

Western tech leap May challenge China supply chains

NEW DELHI

China's supply chain dominance may weaken as Western innovations in batteries, EV manufacturing, and autonomous technology rapidly reshape global industrial competitiveness and markets.

China's current dominance in global supply chains, particularly in sectors like new energy vehicles (NEVs), is likely to face increasing pressure as Western countries accelerate technological innovation.

The report notes that China has been leveraging its control over critical mineral inputs and manufacturing capabilities to strengthen its geopolitical influence and disrupt global supply chains when required. This advantage has been particularly visible in the NEV sector, where China currently holds strong production capacity and market influence.

However, emerging technological breakthroughs in the West are expected to challenge this position. Companies such as Tesla are advancing rapidly in areas like next-generation battery technology, high-efficiency manufacturing systems, and autonomous driving. These developments could significantly reshape global competitiveness in the electric vehicle industry.

The article suggests that while China has made progress in multiple high-tech industries, its global competitiveness still lags behind in critical sectors such as semiconductors and robotics. Although these areas hold strategic importance, China has not yet achieved consistent leadership at the global level.

In contrast, the NEV sector remains the only major manufacturing domain where China currently has a strong chance of sustained leadership. However, this advantage may be temporary, as Western innovation continues to accelerate.

One key concern highlighted is the rapid evolution of battery technology, which could redefine cost structures and production efficiency across the industry. Tesla's high-density production systems are also seen as a major competitive threat, potentially reducing manufacturing costs and challenging China's existing advantages.

Additionally, advancements in driverless vehicle technology are expected to play a transformative role in the automotive sector, further intensifying global competition.

The report estimates that within the next three to five years, China's current supply chain advantages could begin to erode unless it achieves significant technological breakthroughs to maintain its position in an increasingly competitive global market.

Delhi Metro, Airtel Payments Bank launch interoperable RuPay cards

NEW DELHI

In a major move to streamline urban travel, the Delhi Metro Rail Corporation (DMRC) has joined forces with Airtel Payments Bank to launch co-branded RuPay 'On-The-Go' cards.

This new payment solution is powered by the National Common Mobility Card (NCMC) technology, fulfilling the government's "One Nation, One Card" vision.

The partnership was officially unveiled at the DMRC headquarters by Managing Director Vikas Kumar and Airtel Payments Bank CEO Anubrata Biswas. Unlike traditional Delhi Metro cards, which only work within the capital's rail network, these new open-loop cards can be used for metros, buses, and other transit systems across India.

A unified transit experience

Dr. Vikas Kumar highlighted that DMRC is consistently looking for innovative ways to boost passenger convenience. "This partnership allows for seamless travel not just within the Delhi Metro, but across multiple systems in the country," he stated.

Anubrata Biswas echoed this sentiment, noting that the initiative merges banking and transit to simplify daily commutes. While the new NCMC cards will be heavily promoted, the DMRC confirmed that existing metro cards will continue to function normally for the time being, ensuring a smooth transition for the millions of people who use the network daily.

KEY FEATURES OF THE CARD

- Dual functionality: Available as both Debit cards and Prepaid (PPI-MTS) instruments.
- Interoperability: Works across all NCMC-enabled transit networks nationwide.
- Digital top-ups: Users can recharge instantly via the DMRC or Airtel apps, eliminating the need to stand in long queues at station kiosks.
- Widespread availability: The cards will be rolled out at all DMRC stations within the next 10 days.

PROFIT SURGE

IAG reports strong profit despite fuel pressures

LONDON

International Airlines Group (IAG), the parent company of British Airways and Iberia, reported a sharp rise in first-quarter profits, showcasing resilience in the face of rising fuel costs and geopolitical uncertainty linked to the West Asia conflict.

The airline group posted a 77% jump in profit, reaching 351 million euros for the quarter. The performance exceeded market expectations, driven by strong passenger demand, disciplined cost management, and improved operational efficiency across its major airlines.

Despite the positive results, IAG acknowledged significant headwinds from rising jet fuel prices, which have surged due to ongoing tensions in the Middle East. Fuel remains one of the largest operating costs for airlines, and recent global disruptions have increased volatility in pricing.

According to the company, robust travel demand across both transatlantic and European routes helped offset part of the increased cost burden. Business travel recovery and sustained leisure travel demand also contributed to higher load factors and improved revenue per seat.

IAG highlighted that its cost-control measures, including fleet optimization and better capacity management, played a crucial role in maintaining profitability. The group also benefited from its diversified portfolio of airlines operating across different markets, which helped balance regional fluctuations in demand.

Industry analysts note that while the profit surge is encouraging, the aviation sector remains vulnerable to external shocks such as fuel price spikes, currency fluctuations, and geopolitical instability. Airlines across the globe are closely monitoring crude oil trends as they directly impact operational margins.

Looking ahead, IAG said it remains cautiously optimistic about sustained demand growth but warned that fuel cost volatility could continue to affect financial performance in the coming quarters.

The company reaffirmed its commitment to long-term investment in efficiency, sustainability initiatives, and fleet modernization to strengthen competitiveness in an increasingly uncertain global aviation environment.

MOTHERS: The Silent Strength behind Every Family, Dream and Generation

A mother's love shapes lives with sacrifice, strength, warmth, care, and endless devotion.

Mother's Day, celebrated across the world on the second Sunday of May, is a special occasion dedicated to honouring mothers and motherhood. It is a day to express gratitude for the unconditional love, sacrifices and guidance that mothers provide throughout life. From nurturing children with affection to standing as pillars of strength during difficult times, mothers play an irreplaceable role in every family and society.

The celebration of Mother's Day has evolved into a global tradition where people thank their mothers through gifts, greetings, family gatherings and heartfelt messages. Though the methods of celebration may differ across cultures, the emotion behind the day remains universal — appreciation for a mother's endless care and dedication.

In India, Mother's Day is observed with growing enthusiasm, especially among young people who use the occasion to spend quality time with their mothers and acknowledge their contributions. Schools, colleges and social organisations also conduct programmes and activities highlighting the importance of mothers in shaping responsible individuals and strong communities.

Beyond celebrations, the day also serves as a reminder of the challenges many mothers face, including balancing work and family responsibilities. It underlines the need for greater respect, support and equal opportunities for women in society.

As families come together to celebrate the occasion, Mother's Day continues to remind people that a mother's love is one of life's greatest blessings — selfless, enduring and beyond comparison.

WORLD MOTHER'S DAY WISHES

"The Sky-Like Love in Your Palms, Amma"

A mother is the one who gives her children a love as boundless and pure as the sky – a love so vast it cannot be fully seen, understood, measured, or matched. She gives it freely, through her own hands.

She battles between life and death to give us birth. To nurture and raise her children, she pours out all her strength and beauty. She sets aside countless personal desires and dedicates herself completely to the all-round growth and upliftment of her children. In doing so, she often forgets her own self-care. After giving birth, she loses interest in tending to her own physical and mental changes, her meals, her sleep, her comfort, or her appearance.A mother's concern for her child is so immense that even in the middle of a crowd, the moment her baby is hungry, she becomes a mother first and a woman second. Regardless of any uncomfortable surroundings, she feeds her child without hesitation. It is the greatness of a mother that she celebrates the most painful day of her life as our birthday. After giving us life, she holds the bond with her child above all other relationships, caring endlessly. She sheds tears of joy and blesses us when she sees her children succeed. To you, Amma, who gave us an identity and existence on this earth, and who is the reason behind our good health, fortune, name, and fame today – we bow to you.

Adapting with Awareness: Thriving in the Age of AI

Adapting with Awareness: Thriving in the Age of AI We are living in a time of remarkable transformation. Artificial intelligence is no longer a distant concept—it is quietly becoming part of everyday life, influencing how we work, learn, and make decisions. Moments like these often bring a mix of curiosity and caution. Yet, they also carry something far more valuable: the opportunity to grow. Every major shift—whether the arrival of electricity, the internet, or smartphones—has reshaped human life. AI is simply the next step in that journey. What makes this phase unique is not just the speed of change, but the space it creates for individuals to rethink how they engage with the world. Rather than viewing AI as something to compete with, it can be approached as something to collaborate with. When used thoughtfully, it can enhance productivity, simplify complex tasks, and create more room for creativity and meaningful work. At the same time, as external systems become more powerful, the importance of inner clarity becomes even greater. Indian philosophical traditions, including the teachings of Adi Shankaracharya, have long emphasised the value of recognising a deeper sense of self—an inner steadiness that remains consistent even as circumstances change. This understanding does not call for stepping away from progress. Instead, it offers a way to engage with it more effectively—with balance, awareness, and perspective. In practical terms, adapting to this new era can begin with simple shifts: • Viewing AI as a tool for learning and improvement • Developing skills that combine human insight with technology • Staying curious and open to change rather than resistant • Creating small moments in the day to pause, reflect, and reset These are not dramatic changes, but they form a strong and steady foundation. The future will not belong only to those who understand technology, but to those who can balance it with clarity of thought, adaptability, and a grounded sense of self. In learning to hold both—the pace of innovation and the steadiness within—we may find that this transformation is not only reshaping the world around us, but quietly refining the way we live within it.

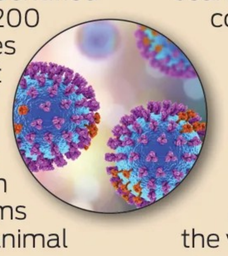
VIRUSES AROUND THE WORLD AND HOW THEY AFFECT US

They are smaller than bacteria, smaller than a grain of sand, smaller than almost anything we can conceive; yet viruses have shaped the course of human history more profoundly than any army, empire, or ideology. From the Black Death-era confusion between bacterial plague and viral disease to the COVID-19 pandemic that brought the modern world to a standstill, viruses have always been silent companions to our civilization. Today, scientists have identified more than 200 species of viruses known to infect humans, and that number only grows as we encroach on new ecosystems and disturb animal habitats that were once far beyond our reach. Understanding viruses; what they are, how they spread, and why they matter; is no longer a concern reserved only for doctors and researchers. In our interconnected world, a viral outbreak in one corner of the globe can reach every continent within weeks. This article takes a journey through the viral landscape of our planet: exploring the major families of viruses, the damage they cause, and the remarkable ways humanity has learned and continues to learn to fight back.



WHAT IS A VIRUS, EXACTLY?

A virus is not quite a living organism. It lacks the cellular machinery to reproduce on its own. Instead, it hijacks the cells of a host organism, using that cell's molecular tools to copy itself thousands of times over before bursting outward to infect more cells. Viruses consist of genetic material either DNA or RNA wrapped in a protein coat called a capsid, and sometimes surrounded by a lipid envelope stolen from a previous host cell.

This stripped-down design makes viruses extraordinarily adaptable. Because they replicate using the host cell's machinery, errors creep in mutations that, over time, can make a virus more contagious, more lethal, or capable of jumping between species. That biological flexibility is precisely what makes them so difficult to control.

THE GREAT VIRAL THREATS OF HISTORY

INFLUENZA: The Seasonal Shapeshifter

Few viruses have caused as much death and disruption as influenza. The 1918 Spanish Flu pandemic infected an estimated 500 million people — roughly one-third of the world's population at the time — and killed somewhere between 50 and 100 million. It remains one of the deadliest events in recorded human history, surpassing the casualties of World War I in a fraction of the time. What makes influenza so dangerous is its remarkable capacity for genetic change. Through a process called antigenic drift, small mutations accumulate in the viral genome over time, allowing the virus to evade immunity built from previous infections. Through a more dramatic process called antigenic shift, two different influenza viruses can swap entire gene segments inside a single host, producing a completely novel strain against which no one has immunity. This is the mechanism that creates pandemic influenza — the kind the world dreads each season.Seasonal influenza still kills between 290,000 and 650,000 people globally every year. Vaccine developers must essentially reformulate the flu shot annually, predicting which strains will dominate the coming season — a scientific guessing game with enormous stakes.

HIV/AIDS: Rewiring the Immune System

When the first cases of a mysterious immune deficiency syndrome appeared in the early 1980s, no one could have predicted how profoundly the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) would reshape global public health, social policy, and medical research. HIV attacks CD4+ T cells, the very immune cells responsible for coordinating the body's defense against infection. As the virus gradually depletes these cells, the immune system collapses — leaving the body vulnerable to opportunistic infections and cancers that a healthy immune system would easily repel.

Since the beginning of the epidemic, approximately 40 million people have died of AIDS-related illnesses. Today, around 39 million people worldwide are living with HIV. Sub-Saharan Africa bears the heaviest burden, accounting for roughly two-thirds of all HIV infections globally.

The development of antiretroviral therapy (ART) in the 1990s transformed HIV from a death sentence into a manageable chronic condition for those with access to medication. But access remains deeply unequal, and stigma continues to prevent millions from seeking testing and treatment. A definitive cure remains elusive, though recent research into gene-editing technologies like CRISPR has opened promising new avenues.

Ebola: The Hemorrhagic Horror

Ebola virus disease is one of the most frightening viral illnesses known to medicine. With case fatality rates ranging from 25% to 90% depending on the outbreak and available care, Ebola causes severe hemorrhagic fever — patients suffer internal and external bleeding, organ failure, and overwhelming shock. The virus is transmitted through direct contact with the bodily fluids of an infected person, making outbreaks especially dangerous in clinical settings where infection control is difficult.

Ebola was first identified in 1976 near the Ebola River in what is now the Democratic Republic of Congo. The 2014–2016 West Africa outbreak was the largest in history, infecting more than 28,000 people and killing over 11,000. It overwhelmed fragile healthcare systems in Guinea, Sierra Leone, and Liberia, revealing the catastrophic consequences of chronic underinvestment in public health infrastructure.

In 2019, the first Ebola vaccine (Ervebo) received regulatory approval — a landmark achievement. But periodic outbreaks in Central Africa demonstrate that Ebola remains an ongoing threat, particularly where healthcare access and community trust are limited.

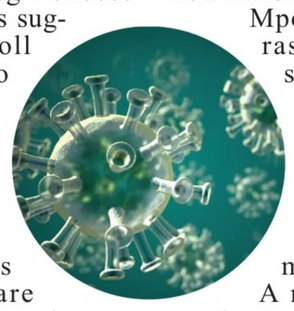
The Modern Pandemic Era

COVID-19: The World Redefined

In December 2019, reports emerged from Wuhan, China, of a cluster of pneumonia cases linked to a novel coronavirus. Within months, SARS-CoV-2 — the virus responsible for COVID-19 — had spread to every corner of the world.

The World Health Organization declared a pandemic in March 2020.

COVID-19 has killed more than 7 million people officially, though excess mortality studies suggest the true toll may be three to five times higher. Beyond the immediate deaths, the pandemic exposed and deepened inequalities — in healthcare access, in economic resilience, in digital connectivity for education, and in the mental health support systems people could access. Long COVID, a condition in which symptoms persist for months or years after the initial infection, has affected tens of millions of survivors, imposing enormous social and economic costs.



Mpox: An Emerging Concern

Once considered a rare disease primarily affecting people in central and west Africa, mpox (formerly known as monkeypox) captured global attention in 2022 when it spread to over 100 countries outside Africa, infecting tens of thousands of people. The outbreak highlighted how quickly a virus with limited human-to-human transmission history can adapt to new transmission networks.

Mpox causes fever, rash, and painful skin lesions. While most infections are self-limiting, the disease can be severe in immunocompromised individuals. A new, more virulent strain (clade Ib) emerged in the DRC in 2023–2024, prompting the WHO to again declare a public health emergency of international concern.

REGIONAL VIRAL BURDENS

Dengue and Mosquito-Borne Viruses in the Tropics

Dengue fever affects an estimated 390 million people annually, making it the most prevalent mosquito-borne viral disease in the world. Transmitted by Aedes aegypti mosquitoes, dengue is endemic across tropical and subtropical regions in Southeast Asia, Latin America, and parts of Africa. Severe dengue can cause plasma leakage, organ impairment, and hemorrhage — and there is no specific antiviral treatment.

Climate change is expanding the geographic range of mosquito vectors, bringing dengue and related viruses like Zika and chikungunya into regions that previously had no exposure. Zika's devastating association with microcephaly in newborns — confirmed during the 2015–2016 outbreak in the Americas — shocked the world and underscored how new viral threats can emerge with alarming speed.

Rotavirus and Childhood Mortality

In wealthy countries, rotavirus is a familiar if unpleasant childhood illness — a few days of diarrhea and vomiting, soon resolved. In low-income countries without access to oral rehydration therapy and vaccines, rotavirus kills hundreds of thousands of children under five every year. Despite the existence of effective vaccines since 2006, inequitable access continues to make this one of the leading causes of childhood diarrheal death globally.

How Viruses Affect Us Beyond Direct Disease

The impact of viruses extends far beyond the immediate illness they cause. Viral infections are implicated in approximately 15–20% of all human cancers. Human Papillomavirus (HPV) causes virtually all cases of cervical cancer — the fourth most common cancer in women worldwide. Hepatitis B and C viruses are the primary causes of liver cancer, responsible for hundreds of thousands of deaths annually. Epstein-Barr virus is linked to several lymphomas and other malignancies.

Justina Mikulskytė clinches Tumakuru Open title after Pawlikowska retires injured

Lithuanian top seed secured ITF crown after injury halted final contest prematurely Sunday

TUMAKURU

Top seed Justina Mikulskytė won the ITF W35 Tumakuru Open women's singles title on Sunday after second seed Zuzanna Pawlikowska retired injured during the final at the Tumakuru District Tennis Association courts.

The much-anticipated summit clash between the tournament's top two seeds came to an unfortunate end after just one game as Pawlikowska was unable to continue because of a shoulder injury that had already troubled her earlier in the tournament.

The Polish player had withdrawn from the doubles final on Saturday owing to the same injury but still chose to compete in the singles final despite discomfort. However, after attempting to continue, she was forced to retire, disappointing spectators who had gathered in large numbers expecting a competitive contest. For Mikulskytė, the victory marked the eighth ITF singles title of her career and added another major achievement to an impressive season on the international circuit. Along with the trophy, the Lithuanian player received prize money of USD 4,860 and earned 35 valuable WTA ranking points.

Pawlikowska, despite the injury setback, finished runner-up and received USD 2,637 along with 23 WTA ranking points for her performances during the tournament.

Speaking during the closing ceremony, Karnataka Home Minister G. Parameshwara reiterated his commitment to promoting sports among youngsters and developing Tumakuru into a major sporting hub.

Parameshwara, who contributed USD 30,000 towards the tournament prize money, said encouraging youth participation in sports was essential for building a healthier and drug-free society. He added that efforts were underway to create better infrastructure and sporting opportunities in Tumakuru.

Several officials and dignitaries attended the event, including representatives from the All India Tennis Association (AITA), Karnataka State Lawn Tennis Association (KSLTA), district administration and tournament organisers.

In the final result, Justina Mikulskytė was declared winner after leading 1-0 when Pawlikowska retired hurt from the match.

India women archers edge China in thrilling shoot-off to clinch WC gold

Composed Indian trio defeated hosts China after dramatic shoot-off finish in Shanghai final.

SHANGHAI

India's women's recurve archery team produced a remarkable performance under pressure to defeat hosts China and win the gold medal at the Archery World Cup Stage 2 on Sunday. The trio of Deepika Kumari, Ankita Bhakat and teenage sensation Kumkum Mohod overcame a spirited Chinese challenge in a tense shoot-off to secure a 5-4 victory in Shanghai.

The final remained evenly contested throughout as both teams finished the regulation sets locked at 4-4. India, however, held their nerve in the decisive shoot-off, scoring 28 against China's 26 to seal the title in front of a vocal home crowd.

The triumph marked India's first women's recurve team World Cup gold medal since 2021 and came just a day after compound archer Sahil Jadhav won bronze, taking India's medal tally at the tournament to two.

The gold-winning campaign became even more special because India had defeated powerhouse South Korea in the semifinals. South Korea remains the most successful nation in Olympic archery history, making the victory a significant achievement for the Indian side.

Veteran archer Deepika once again played a leading role for the team. A member of India's World Cup-winning squads in Guatemala City and Paris in 2021, she claimed her seventh World Cup team gold medal since 2010. Throughout the final, she guided and motivated her younger teammates during crucial moments.

India started strongly by narrowly winning the opening set 54-53, with Deepika delivering successive perfect 10s. China bounced back in the second set, levelling the contest after Deepika missed a crucial final arrow. The hosts then moved ahead 4-2 after edging the third set.

Facing defeat in the fourth set, India stayed alive after Chinese archer Yu Qi failed to convert a match-winning opportunity.

The contest then moved into a dramatic shoot-off where Ankita opened with a 9, Kumkum followed with a superb 10, and Deepika calmly sealed victory with a final arrow scoring 9.

The victory provided a major boost for Indian archery ahead of upcoming international competitions.

Daniel Dubois survives early knockdowns to reclaim heavyweight world title

MANCHESTER

Daniel Dubois produced a remarkable comeback performance to defeat Fabio Wardley and capture the WBO heavyweight title in Manchester, becoming a two-time heavyweight world champion.

Dubois overcame a disastrous start, having been knocked down just 10 seconds into the contest after Wardley landed a powerful overhand right at the Co-op Live Arena. Wardley floored him again in the third round, leaving many expecting the fight to end early.

However, the former IBF champion showed tremendous resilience and gradually turned the fight around with relentless pressure and heavy right-hand punches that caused visible swelling and cuts on Wardley's face.

The referee finally stopped the contest early in the 11th round after Wardley absorbed a sustained barrage of punches without adequately defending himself. The victory improved Dubois' professional record to 23 wins and three defeats, with 22 knockouts.

"I know I've got heart. I'm a warrior in there," Dubois said after reclaiming world championship status. "What a great fight and what a battle. I'm No. 1 again."

The defeat marked the first loss of Wardley's professional career. The British heavyweight entered the bout unbeaten with a record of 20 wins and one draw and was making the first defence of his WBO title.

Despite the defeat, Dubois praised his opponent for his toughness and determination throughout the contest. "He's a durable guy and a great warrior. It was an honour to share the ring with him," he said.

Dubois had previously lost his IBF heavyweight belt to Oleksandr Usyk via knockout at Wembley Stadium last year. The latest victory has now revived speculation over another potential blockbuster showdown in the heavyweight division.

Rising British heavyweight Moses Itauma, who was present ringside, could emerge as Dubois' next challenger after recent calls for him to become the mandatory WBO contender.

Meanwhile, promoter Frank Warren confirmed that the fight contract includes a rematch clause, leaving open the possibility of a second Dubois-Wardley clash in the near future.

The undercard also produced a major upset as Zak Chelli stunned Cuban fighter David Morrell with a 10th-round stoppage victory in the light heavyweight division.

Sean Strickland regains UFC middleweight crown

NEWARK

Sean Strickland reclaimed the UFC middleweight championship after edging past Khamzat Chimaev by split decision in the main event of UFC 328 at the Prudential Center.

In a contest overshadowed by heated exchanges and controversial pre-fight remarks, Strickland emerged victorious after five closely fought rounds. Two judges scored the bout 48-47 in favour of Strickland, while the third judge awarded the same scoreline to Chimaev.

Despite intense hostility leading into the fight, both fighters maintained discipline inside the octagon. Strickland, who had previously won the middleweight belt in 2023 before losing it during his first title defence, became only the second former champion to regain the UFC's 185-pound title.

Following the victory, Strickland acknowledged that he had gone "too far" with some of his remarks during the build-up and apologised to fans offended by the pre-fight controversy.

Chimaev, fighting under the United Arab Emirates banner, suffered the first defeat of his professional MMA career after entering the contest unbeaten in 16 fights.

The co-main event saw Joshua Van successfully defend his UFC flyweight championship with a dominant stoppage victory over Japan's Tatsuro Taira.

Van overwhelmed Taira with aggressive striking and superior boxing before the referee stopped the fight midway through the fifth round. The brutal encounter left Taira bloodied and unable to respond effectively to Van's relentless attacks.

The bout made history as the first UFC title fight contested between two fighters born in the 2000s and also the first championship contest between two Asian competitors in UFC history.

Spieth trails Scheffler in race for career Grand Slam glory

ARONIMINK

Jordan Spieth and Scottie Scheffler are both one major away from completing the career Grand Slam, but their paths look very different.

Spieth, once a teenage prodigy, is chasing history at the PGA Championship with his 10th attempt at the missing piece, struggling for form after wrist surgery.

Meanwhile, Scheffler, now world No. 1, appears closer to joining golf's elite club after multiple major wins and dominant consistency.

While Spieth hopes for a turnaround, Scheffler's rapid rise has shifted expectations, with many seeing him as the likelier candidate to complete the Grand Slam first in upcoming majors.

Manchester City keep title race alive with commanding victory over Brentford

MANCHESTER

Manchester City kept the Premier League title race alive with an impressive 3-0 victory over Brentford at the Etihad Stadium, reducing leaders Arsenal's advantage at the top of the table to just two points.

Second-half goals from Jeremy Doku, Erling Haaland and Omar Marmoush secured a crucial win for City, who now have 74 points from 35 matches with three games remaining this season.

Despite the victory, City still require Arsenal to drop points in one of their remaining fixtures to revive hopes of retaining the league title. Arsenal were scheduled to face relegation-threatened West Ham United on Sunday.

City dominated possession and attacking opportunities throughout the match but Brentford defended resolutely before Doku finally broke the deadlock in the 60th minute. The Belgian winger cut inside from the left flank and curled a superb right-footed strike into the top corner, leaving goalkeeper Caoimhin Kelleher with no chance.

Haaland doubled the lead after 75 minutes with a scrappy but important finish. Following a blocked attempt, the Norwegian striker reacted quickly to back-heel the ball into the net for his 26th league goal of the campaign.

Marmoush sealed the victory deep into stoppage time after collecting a precise pass from Haaland and calmly finishing into the far corner.

Speaking after the match, Haaland insisted City remained focused on the title race. "If you play for Manchester City, you think about titles every single day," he said.

City extended their unbeaten Premier League run since January and continued piling pressure on Arsenal in what has become another dramatic title battle.

Brentford's defeat dealt a setback to their hopes of securing European qualification next season. The visitors remained eighth in the standings, four points behind the top six positions.

The hosts registered 25 shots compared to Brentford's four and created several more opportunities, with Phil Foden forcing Kelleher into an excellent save during the first half.

The match also witnessed heated moments, including Brentford appeals for red cards and a late penalty claim that was rejected after a VAR review.

SC Bengaluru's promotion hopes dashed after heavy defeat to Delhi FC

Bengaluru side suffered crushing defeat as Delhi FC tightened grip atop standings.

BENGALURU

SC Bengaluru's hopes of securing promotion in the I-League 2 came to a disappointing end after suffering a crushing 5-1 defeat against Delhi FC in Mohali.

A sensational first-half hat-trick from league top-scorer Himanshu Jangra completely dismantled the Bengaluru side and left them with no realistic chance of finishing in the promotion spots with only one round remaining in the competition.

Delhi FC dominated proceedings from the opening whistle and took the lead in the 12th minute through Jangra, who continued his impressive form this season. The striker doubled the advantage in the 21st minute before completing his hat-trick just before halftime in the 44th minute, putting Delhi firmly in control of the contest.

SC Bengaluru struggled to contain Delhi's attacking movement and were repeatedly caught out defensively. Despite the setback, the visitors showed brief signs of resistance in the second half when Devadath S scored in the 62nd minute to reduce the deficit.

However, any hopes of a comeback quickly disappeared as Delhi FC regained complete control of the match. Wungshung Lungleng added the fourth goal in the 81st minute before Akash Tirkey sealed the emphatic victory deep into stoppage time.

The defeat left SC Bengaluru in sixth place with eight points from seven matches, ending their promotion ambitions for the season.

Meanwhile, the result significantly boosted Delhi FC's chances of qualification as they climbed back to the top of the table with 16 points. FC Bengaluru United slipped to second place with 14 points but still remained in contention for promotion ahead of the final round.

FC Bengaluru United will now face bottom-placed GMSC in their final league fixture, while Delhi FC will take on United Kolkata in what promises to be a decisive clash in the race for promotion.

Earlier, FC Bengaluru United had briefly moved to the top of the standings after registering a commanding 4-1 victory over Sporting Club de Goa at the Dravid-Padukone Centre of Excellence in Bengaluru.

'I regret bringing Messi to Kolkata': Satadru Dutta blames officials for fiasco

KOLKATA

Satadru Dutta has blamed police, administration and political interference for the chaotic Lionel Messi event at Salt Lake Stadium in Kolkata, saying he regrets bringing Lionel Messi to the city after the fiasco that unfolded during the much-hyped tour.

Dutta said all security protocols were followed, including Z and Z-plus arrangements, but claimed unauthorised entries inside Salt Lake Stadium derailed the planned show flow despite multiple coordination meetings with authorities.

He alleged that VIP and non-accredited individuals entered the pitch area, surrounding Lionel Messi and disrupting security, while questioning why police failed to enforce accreditation rules agreed in advance.

Dutta further said the event turned controversial after political figures reportedly entered without being part of official show protocol, adding that Messi's management expressed concern over crowd control and safety.

He also recalled his 38-day custody, claiming he was made a scapegoat despite having obtained all necessary permissions and approvals from relevant authorities, while insisting the investigation was not impartial.

Comparing Kolkata with other Indian cities, he said events in Mumbai, Delhi and Hyderabad were better managed due strict adherence to security protocols and controlled access.

Ultimately, Dutta said he deeply regrets bringing Lionel Messi to Salt Lake Stadium given the chaos, reputation damage, and security risks, calling it a lesson in event management and accountability. He maintained that nearly 20 coordination meetings were held with police and administrative officials before the event, and that accreditation cards were issued strictly based on approved zones and security clearances.

However, he alleged that pressure was exerted for additional accreditation passes, which he refused, leading to tensions with certain political representatives and event authorities.

Dutta said the situation worsened when Lionel Messi and his management decided to leave the venue prematurely, citing security concerns, which left fans disappointed and the event abruptly halted midway.

He also confirmed plans to pursue legal action for defamation and damages, stating that the incident had significantly affected his reputation as a sports event organiser in India, and called for an impartial judicial probe into the entire episode.

CSK edge LSG in thriller to boost IPL 2026 playoff hopes

Chennai Super Kings defeat Lucknow Super Giants in thrilling IPL clash match

CHENNAI

Chennai Super Kings defeated Lucknow Super Giants by five wickets in a high-scoring IPL 2026 encounter at the MA Chidambaram Stadium on Sunday, chasing down 204 with two balls to spare after a dramatic finish. Urvil Patel's explosive knock set the tone early as CSK dominated the powerplay, while LSG's bowlers struggled with dropped catches and inconsistent lines under pressure. Earlier LSG posted 203 for 8, powered by Josh Inglis' aggressive batting and Rishabh Pant's quick cameo, but CSK's bowling attack staged a strong comeback in the middle overs. Ruturaj Gaikwad anchored the chase before Shivam Dube and Dewald Brevis accelerated in the final overs, ensuring CSK stayed ahead despite a brief LSG fightback.

Key moments included multiple dropped catches by LSG fielders, a costly missed review, and a flurry of sixes that swung momentum decisively towards CSK. With this win, CSK strengthens its playoff hopes while LSG is officially eliminated from IPL 2026 contention after suffering its eighth loss in eleven matches. Both teams will now look to regroup, with CSK aiming to climb further up the table and LSG playing for pride in remaining fixtures. Urvil Patel was the standout performer with a blistering half-century, while Sanju Samson and Ruturaj Gaikwad provided solid starts that kept CSK ahead of the required rate throughout the innings. LSG's innings featured brilliant spells from Mitchell Marsh and Josh Inglis, but their bowling unit failed to defend a competitive total on a batting-friendly pitch.

Bowlers must evolve and develop new skills to survive T20 cricket: Shane Bond

Ultra-aggressive batting in modern T20 cricket demands smarter, adaptable bowling strategies from players.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Former New Zealand pacer Shane Bond believes bowlers must constantly reinvent themselves and develop wider skillsets to survive in modern T20 cricket, where aggressive batting and soaring scoring rates are increasingly dominating the game.

Bond admitted that bowlers across teams are struggling to adapt to batting-friendly conditions and relentless attacking approaches from batters.

The Royals conceded 229 runs in the match, marking the seventh occasion this season that they allowed opponents to cross the 200-run mark. Bond, who serves as Rajasthan Royals' bowling coach, said bowlers need to think differently instead of repeating the same methods despite poor outcomes.

He stressed that success in T20 cricket now depends heavily on decision-making, execution and preparation. According to Bond, bowlers must spend more time analysing batters' scoring zones and develop flexibility in their bowling styles and tactics.

The former fast bowler said modern batters have expanded their range of shots significantly, regularly using scoops, reverse hits and uppercuts to unsettle bowlers. To counter this, bowlers too must evolve by learning new angles, varying run-ups and becoming effective from different sides of the wicket.

Bond observed that teams repeatedly using predictable bowling patterns are often punished severely in the IPL, where batters attack fearlessly from the outset. He added that bowlers capable of adapting quickly and mastering multiple variations could elevate themselves into match-winners and highly sought-after T20 stars.The ongoing IPL season has witnessed a surge in high-scoring matches and successful 200-plus chases, raising fresh debate over whether bowlers are being left behind in the entertainment-driven format. Bond, however, believes the challenge also presents a major opportunity for bowlers willing to innovate and expand their game.

CSK urged fans to avoid political banners during Vijay's swearing-in day match

CH NEWS, , CHENNAI

Chennai Super Kings had issued a special appeal to fans ahead of their IPL 2026 clash against Lucknow Super Giants at the M.A. Chidambaram Stadium, requesting supporters to avoid bringing political banners, flags or hoardings into the venue.

The appeal had come as the high-profile IPL match coincided with the swearing-in ceremony of Vijay, president of Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam, who took oath as the new Chief Minister of Tamil Nadu.

Recognising the massive fan following enjoyed by both CSK and Vijay across Tamil Nadu and the country, the franchise urged supporters to keep the focus entirely on cricket during the game at Chepauk.

In a message posted on social media platform X, CSK had requested fans to enjoy the match in the spirit of "Yellove" and refrain from displaying material associated with any political party or individual.

Vijay's rise from cinema superstar to Chief Minister had become one of the most talked-about political developments in Tamil Nadu after his party secured 108 seats in the recent Assembly elections. The actor-turned-politician reportedly held multiple rounds of discussions with allies and met Governor Rajendra Vishwanath Arlekar before staking claim to form the government.

Meanwhile, on the cricket front, Chennai Super Kings had entered the match needing a victory to keep their playoff hopes alive.

IPL's batting boom leaves bowlers struggling for relevance in high-scoring tournament

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The ongoing edition of the Indian Premier League (IPL) has once again highlighted cricket's growing tilt towards batters, with massive totals, fearless strokeplay and flat pitches turning bowlers into mere supporting characters in the tournament.

Scores above 200, once considered match-winning totals, have now become routine. Teams are not only posting huge totals regularly but are also chasing them down with remarkable ease. After 50 matches this season, there have already been 42 totals exceeding 200, while successful 200-plus chases have risen sharply compared to previous editions.

Cricket experts and former players believe a major reason behind this shift is the Impact Player rule, which allows teams to strengthen batting line-ups further. The additional batting cushion has encouraged players to adopt aggressive approaches from the start, knowing there is enough firepower waiting lower down the order.Royal Challengers Bengaluru batter Devdutt Padikkal recently admitted that the presence of powerful finishers gives top-order batters the freedom to attack without fear of collapse. This fearless style, combined with flat pitches offering little help to bowlers, has significantly altered the balance of the game.

Legendary spinner Muttiah Muralitharan observed that even great bowlers like Shane Warne would have struggled under current conditions. He noted that while spinners might still take wickets occasionally, batters would continue scoring heavily because of batting-friendly surfaces.

Statistics also reveal the declining role of spinners this season. Their share of overs and wickets has reduced noticeably, while economy rates have increased due to relentless attacking cricket.Muralitharan said producing fairer pitches could restore balance between bat and ball, but admitted entertainment-driven T20 cricket now prioritises boundaries and high scores. While the batting spectacle excites fans, many believe cricket risks losing its traditional contest between bat and ball if bowlers continue to be pushed into irrelevance.

IPL experience has improved my all-format batting, says Jacob Bethell

CH NEWS, RAIPUR

Young England batter Jacob Bethell believes his experience in the Indian Premier League with Royal Challengers Bengaluru has significantly helped improve his batting across all formats of the game.

The 22-year-old, currently in his second year with the franchise, has featured in only six matches so far and earned opportunities this season mainly because of the injury to fellow England player Phil Salt.Bethell dismissed suggestions that he would have benefited more by playing County cricket instead of spending time on the bench in the IPL.Former England captain Alastair Cook had earlier remarked that Bethell should focus on County cricket for Warwickshire rather than remaining a reserve player in the IPL. However, former England batter Kevin Pietersen defended the youngster, stating that training and sharing dressing rooms with elite international players would aid his development.

Bethell said the IPL offers exposure to some of the best cricketers in the world and provides invaluable learning opportunities that cannot easily be replicated elsewhere. He added that interacting with experienced players, observing different approaches and handling pressure situations have contributed positively to his growth as a batter.

The left-hander maintained that being part of such a high-profile tournament would only strengthen his game rather than hinder his progress.Meanwhile, Sherfane Rutherford of Mumbai Indians stressed the importance of quickly assessing conditions in Raipur, which is hosting an IPL match after a long gap. Rutherford said batters must understand the nature of the wicket early and adjust their approach accordingly to maximise scoring opportunities in unfamiliar conditions.

Tight Orange and Purple Cap races add excitement to IPL 2026 season

CH NEWS, CHENNAI

The race for the Orange and Purple Caps in IPL 2026 has emerged as one of the most exciting storylines of the tournament, with no single player managing to dominate either batting or bowling charts as the league stage approaches its final phase.

Unlike previous seasons where one or two standout performers often surged ahead early, this year's competition has witnessed constant changes in rankings, keeping fans and franchises closely engaged with every match.

Heinrich Klaasen of Sunrisers Hyderabad currently leads the Orange Cap standings with 494 runs from 11 matches. His teammate Abhishek Sharma follows closely with 475 runs, while K. L. Rahul of Delhi Capitals occupies third place with 468 runs.

Shubman Gill, captain of Gujarat Titans, remains firmly in contention with 462 runs from 10 matches. Rajasthan Royals youngster Vaibhav Sooryavanshi and Gujarat Titans batter Sai Sudharsan are tied with 440 runs each, highlighting the narrow margins separating the leading run-scorers.

The Purple Cap contest has been equally competitive. Gujarat Titans fast bowler Kagiso Rabada leads the wicket-taking charts with 18 wickets from 11 games. Bhuvneshwar Kumar of Royal Challengers Bengaluru and Anshul Kamboj of Chennai Super Kings are just behind with 17 wickets each.

Interestingly, pacers have completely dominated the Purple Cap leaderboard, with no spinner featuring among the top wicket-takers this season. With several crucial matches still remaining, both races are expected to remain fiercely contested until the final stages of the league.

MS Dhoni unlikely to return immediately despite fitness efforts, says Anil Kumble

CH NEWS, CHENNAI

Former India captain Anil Kumble believed veteran wicketkeeper-batter MS Dhoni was unlikely to return immediately to the playing XI for Chennai Super Kings despite making strong efforts to regain full fitness during IPL 2026.

Dhoni had missed the entire season so far after suffering a knee injury during a practice session ahead of the tournament. However, reports suggested the former CSK captain had intensified his rehabilitation and training sessions in recent weeks.

Kumble said CSK traditionally preferred maintaining continuity and rarely altered a successful combination.

According to Kumble, the franchise strongly believed in backing players and preserving momentum once the team started winning consistently. He pointed out that CSK had improved significantly after a difficult start to the season and were unlikely to disrupt the balance of the side by making unnecessary changes.

Kumble revealed that Dhoni had been batting extensively during practice sessions and had also spent time wicket-keeping in the nets, something considered unusual given his long-standing preference to avoid keeping practice sessions during IPL campaigns.

The former India spinner said Dhoni was clearly working hard to achieve match fitness, but added that the veteran cricketer himself would probably avoid rushing back into the team if it affected the rhythm and chemistry of the side.CSK had revived their playoff hopes by winning three of their last four matches and climbed to sixth place on the IPL points table with 10 points from 10 matches. The five-time champions remained firmly in contention for a top-four finish and required victories in at least three of their remaining fixtures to strengthen their qualification chances.

Dhoni's absence had remained one of the biggest talking points of the season.

Prince Yadav and Mohsin Khan can play for India, says Bharat Arun

CH NEWS, CHENNAI

Bharat Arun, bowling coach of Lucknow Super Giants, believes young pacers Prince Yadav and Mohsin Khan possess the talent and temperament to represent India in the future if they continue improving their game.

Arun praised the growth and confidence shown by Prince during the ongoing season.

Prince has emerged as one of the standout performers for LSG this year, claiming 16 wickets and delivering crucial spells across different phases of matches. The 24-year-old pacer, who rose through tennis-ball cricket, recently grabbed attention after dismissing Virat Kohli with an impressive delivery during LSG's previous match against Royal Challengers Bengaluru.

Arun said Prince had shown glimpses of his potential last season, but the coaching staff worked closely with him during pre-season camps to strengthen his understanding of his natural strengths and execution under pressure.

The former India bowling coach explained that bowlers often struggle mentally in high-pressure situations, but players who trust their strengths and maintain clarity are more likely to succeed consistently.

Arun also highlighted Mohsin Khan's abilities and described LSG's pace attack as one of the reasons behind his association with the franchise. He noted that experienced pacer Mohammed Shami has been performing well, while Mayank Yadav is gradually regaining rhythm after limited match practice.

According to Arun, LSG possesses several exciting bowling prospects capable of progressing to the highest level. He said both Prince and Mohsin have the necessary qualities to play for India if they continue developing their skills and maintaining consistency in competitive cricket.
